JUDGE APPROVES HUSBAND'S WILL; REVIEWS TRAGEDY

No Proof of Undue Influence Shown Court Says and Evidence Against Widow Called Vague.

The will of Clarence F. Glover was allowed to-day. Judge Charles J. McIntire of the East Cambridge Probate Court upheld the will in his decision on the contest which was heard before him. The contest lasted nine weeks.

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover will now receive the income of three-fourths of the Glover estate. Seymour Glover, the only one of the five brothers who did not contest the will, will get the income of one-fourth of the estate.

CHARGE OF UNDUE INFLUENCE NOT PROVED.

Judge McIntire's decision contained 2,000 words. In it he declared that the charge of undue influence in the making of the will was not proved.

Of the alleged murder of Clarence F. Glover, he said:

"It was reasonable for him (Glover) to suppose that he and she (Hattie Le Blanc) were the only ones present (in the laundry); that none other knew of their clandestine visit; that she was close to him, that when he turned to wrest away the weapon it was from the hand of Hattie Le Blanc."

The more important parts of Judge McIntire's finding are as follows:

"The sole issue in this case is upon the question of improper and undue influence alleged to have been exercised by Lillian M. Glover, by means of threats and bodily harm. The specifications set forth by the contestants that Lillian M. Glover conceived and made a plot or plan, which involved compelling Glover to make this instrument under duress and by fear, and after execution the taking of his life in order that the will might take effect and the estate thereby come into her immediate possession.

Burden on Contestants

"The burden of establishin gthis unusual and most serious allegation lies clearly upon the contestants, who are four of five brothers of the deceased. No testimony was produced of any particular kind, when or where the improper influence is said to have been exerted, but it is claimed to have been exercised constantly during a period of at least two years.

"Much of the evidence submitted would seem at first to be irrelevant at the trial of an issue of undue influence exercised upon the maker of a will, and it should have been excluded were it not for the unusual specifications covering the alleged preconceived plot, including all of the facts set forth.

"It may be remarked in considering the intentions of the contestants that whoever may be the person who made the murderous assault upon Glover in that dark room, it does not seem at all unnatural for him to have believed it to have been Hattie Le Blanc, even though, as he said to the doctor, he could conceive of no reason for her to do so under the circumstances which brought them there together. It was reasonable for him to suppose that he and she were the only ones present; that none other knew of their clandestine visit; that she was close to him; that when he turned to wrest away the weapon it was from the hand of Hattie Le Blanc.

"In the darkness and in his terror and excitement it is possible for him to have been mistaken in his conclusion and his mind may not have been entirely clear in consequence of the drugs which were administered to ease his pain, but I am unable to believe the intimation that in relating the circumstances of the attack, knowing as he did from the physicians the seriousness of his condition, he intentionally falsified to them.

"Admit, as they the contestants argue, that the testimony points convincingly to Lillian Glover as the assassin, her act would be more consistent with a purpose of revenge or punishment for persisting with his improper relations with Hattie than with a supposed plan to force him to make a will for the purpose of taking his life and benefiting by it.

"Concerning the testimony of vague expressions of his fear of her and his belief that some day she would shoot him, and his statements, if made, of the fact that he was about to make or had made a will differently in its provisions from what his brothers might expect, I am unable to find sufficient indication that he was compelled irresistibly to make a will against his conscience or desire. The provisions made in the will for the wife do not seem excessive or unnatural.

Testimony About Revolver.

"I have carefully considered the desire and offer of the contestants to introduce additional testimony relating to circumstances connected with the death of Glover, the purchase and identification of a certain revolver, said to be in the hands of the police, as the revolver which caused his death, which revolver, the contestants claim, can be shown to have been purchased by Mrs. Glover about that time, but I believe that such additional testimony can give no assistance to the court in determining the issue here. I declined to hear it.

"Even if there was a doubt as to whether or not undue influence had been exerted over Glover to make him make the will it must be remembered that a will is not irrevocable and that while Glover was free he had ample opportunity to have destroyed, revoked or annuled this instrument, and to have made another more to his liking at any time during the seven re-

KELIHER HELD IN $25,000

William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher was held in $25,000 bail by United States Commissioner Hayes to-day for a continued hearing on April 30, on a charge of aiding and abetting George W. Coleman in his application of funds of the National City Bank of Cambridge.

Keliher waived reading of the complaint and pleaded not guilty to the charge. His araignment took about one minute.

Preceding the arraignment, while Keliher was locked in cage No. 1 in the office of United States Marshal Guy Murchie, there was an argument between United States District Attorney French and Daniel H. Coakley, counsel for Keliher, over the question of bail.

Mr. French thought $50,000 was a proper figure. Mr. Coakley argued for $25,000.

Continuance for One Week.

After Keliher made his plea before the commissioner, United States District Attorney French asked for the continuance of one week, which was granted.

When the commissioner said he would accept $25,000 bail, Mr. Coakley said there was no bail present then. The commissioner said he would be in his office until late this afternoon and could be reached after that at his home. The commissioner said that, if notified at his home that suitable bail had been found, he would go to the jail to accept it and make the usual arrangements for Keliher's release.

Meanwhile "Big Bill" was remanded to Charles Street Jail, where he had spent the night.

So far as known last night was the first time Keliher ever slept behind bars.

Keliher was as jaunty and smiling as possible from start to finish. He was brought from the jail to the Postoffice building in a closed carriage by Deputy Marshal James H. Waters and Bailiff Tighe at 10 o'clock.

A mob of 2,000 had gathered about the Water street entrance of the Postoffice building.

Natty as ever, despite his night in jail, with his light Spring suit fitting without a wrinkle, and with his sporty checked cap slightly cocked on his head, "Big Bill" surveyed the crowd with a careless smile.

"I seem to be a curiosity here," he observed to the deputy.

He was taken into the elevator, while city police and deputies struggled to check the following spectators. In the office of Marshal Murchie, on the third floor, Keliher was walked into the first of the three steel cages for prisoners. As "Big Bill" heard the lock snap behind his powerful form he said with his debonnair air:

"Well, I seem to have a lot of notoriety in this good old town."

Miss Laura M. Atwood, a dashing young woman who occupied an expensive suite at the Hotel Bellevue, exposed Keliher and others of the fake faro bank gang in the big Cambridge bank fraud. Revelations of the gang's secrets made by her to the Federal Grand Jury caused the arrest of Keliher, charged with complicity in the wrecking of the National City Bank of Cambridge.

Her story, it is reported on good authority to-day, will lead to other arrests. It is declared that the arrest of a bank official, not hitherto named in the investigation, is imminent.

Girl's Story of Frauds.

Miss Atwood's evidence is reported to have included many of the details of the operations of the faro gang here and in New York and of the friendship of Keliher and George W. Coleman, the young bookkeeper whose thefts wrecked the Cambridge bank.

These details Miss Atwood learned direct from "Big Bill" Keliher. She and Keliher were very friendly while the faro gang was active in Boston, previous to the bank smash, when young Coleman was carrying off the bank funds and losing them to Keliher.

Whether or not Keliher has been indicted will not be known until the report is made Tuesday. Mr. French is, however, confident that Miss Atwood's evidence, coupled with the stories of Coleman and his young chum, Wilson W. Lockhart, is sufficient ground for causing Keliher's arrest.

Keliher's partners in the faro gang have left Boston. They made a hurried exit when the news of Keliher's arrest spread. It is reported, however, that they are under the surveillance of secret service men and can be located if wanted.

The arrest of Keliher was a great surprise to him and to the men who helped relieve Coleman of the stolen funds of the Cambridge bank. Since "Big Bill's" return a few weeks ago from New York he has been appearing on the streets as though confident that no attempt would be made by the Federal authorities to connect him with the bank wrecking. He failed to reckon on Miss Atwood.

Charged With Abetting Coleman.

The complaint against Keliher was sworn out by Frederick D. Schmid, a special agent of the Department of Justice. It recites the complaint against Coleman, who is under indictment on the charge of "wilful misapplication of the funds, moneys and credits of the bank." Appended to it under date of April 22 is the following:

"On complaint of Frederick D. Schmid, one William J. Keliher of Winthrop, in January, 1910, unlawfully, knowingly and fraudulently did aid and abet said Coleman in the wilful misapplication of the funds, moneys and credits of the bank.

"William A. Hayes,
U. S. Commissioner."

The complaint against Keliher was sworn out while the Federal Grand Jury was hearing evidence.

U. S. WARSHIPS CALLED UPON IN CHINESE CRISIS

WASHINGTON, April 23.—United States Minister Calhoun at Pekin has requested Rear Admiral Hubbard to have his Asiatic fleet now at Amoy, in readiness to render assistance should it be found necessary.

Minister Calhoun wires to the State Department that there is no improvement in conditions in Hunan and that there are grave fears that the trouble is spreading. Vice-Consul Baugh at Hankow confirms the published report of the burning of the missions and customhouse at Changsha, and he has requested Americans in that city to come to Hankow for safety.

BITTER REVOLT IN CHINA SPREADS INTO A "HOLY WAR"

HANKOW, April 23.—Thirteen ringleaders of anti-foreign mobs were beheaded at Chang Sha yesterday by the commander in chief of the troops sent there to quell the uprising. This drastic action however, according to advices received here to-day, has served merely to inflame the mobs further.

Chang Sha is terror-stricken and the inflamed country districts of Hu-Nan Province are reported beyond all control. The situation of many missionaries cut off from escape is desperate. The hatred of foreigners in Hu-Nan has broken out with a virulence equalled only in the days of the Boxer uprising. The disorders have turned completely from anger over the corner in rice, engineered by officials, and a wave of hatred for all Christians has swept the entire province until the revolt has become a "holy war."

Soldiers Join Mobs.

Further reports of pillage and murder reached here to-day, in spite of the cutting of telegraph wires by mobs. Refugees, native and Christian, are abandoning their homes and following the missionaries, some of whom reached here yesterday.

While it is believed that the presence of 3,000 troops in Chang Sha and the fact that gunboats in the Siang River have their guns trained on the town will prevent a repetition of the most serious disorders in which the city was partly burned the situation in the outlying districts is beyond control. The troops are disaffected and hundreds are reported to have joined the mobs mutinying. The meagre reports already at hand indicate that more than 1,000 deaths have already resulted from the uprising and a score of villages and settlements have been wiped out.

Hu-Nan in Revolt.

The government is unable to send into the province an adequate force to control the entire territory. With more than 20,000,000 inhabitants Hu-Nan to-day is virtually a revolting nation within a nation. Several British residents of Chang Sha arrived here to-day acting on the advice of their consul who warned all to leave the city. The natives of Hankow are restive and all foreigners are concentrating in their quarter leaving the outskirts to the Chinese entirely.

TRIED ON A CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

Charged with manslaughter, Robert J. Eagan of Grant street, Quincy, appeared before Judge Avery in Quincy District Court to-day. He case was continued until next Saturday. Eagan is charged with causing the death of Roscoe Hunt of Brockton, a passenger on a car on which Eagan was conductor. The alleged assault took place in City Square, April 9.

FIGHTER IS KILLED BY BOUT

Max Landy, a bantamweight prize fighter, died early to-day at his home, No. 28 Angell street, Roxbury, following a six round bout last night at Brockton with Joe O'Brien of Cambridge.

It is believed that Landy's death was directly the result of his fistic contest with O'Brien. Although the fight was declared a draw it was said that O'Brien seemed the stronger of the two and that at one time he had Landy almost out.

Landy was about nineteen years old. He was known as "the little fellow with the bad punch." He had boxed a number of times at the Armory Athletic Club in Boston and at other athletic clubs in this city.

His opponent, O'Brien, was the national champion 105-pound fighter at one time. O'Brien had not been doing any fighting for about two years until last night.

The bout was at the Union Athletic Club in Brockton, and was refereed by Maffitt Flaherty. Mr. Flaherty, when told of Landy's death to-day, said:

"The bout was six rounds, but I did not think that either of the young men was hurt. When they got through they both leaped out of the ring. They were laughing, and they placed their arms around each other, as fighters sometimes do, and walked away.

"I am greatly surprised that the young man died and can hardly believe that it was the result of the bout at Brockton. There was no indication of such a fatal result, at least."

The Cambridge police were notified of the death to-day and they began an investigation of it. They looked up O'Brien and questioned him. They also delved into the fight at Brockton, notifying the police there of what had happened.

A. Walker Combes, manager of O'Brien, said to-day:

"This is a great surprise to me. Why, after the bout last night Landy and O'Brien seemed all right. They were the first on the program, and when they got through they remained together an hour or so watching the rest of the show. They chatted and talked together the very best of friends, and it was apparent that Landy did not consider that O'Brien had handled him at all roughly."

Joe Levins acted as Landy's manager. He was greatly shocked when he learned that the boy was dead.

"The bout finished at 9 o'clock last night," said Levins. "We all came back on the car together and when we got to Dorchester Landy got off and went to his home. That was at 12:15 o'clock, more than three hours after the fight was finished. It would appear that the bout had nothing to do with Landy's death. He was in the best of humor when he bade the rest of the party good night."

SCHOOLHOUSE STRIKE OF 100

One hundred men were called out on strike at the new Dorchester High School at noon to-day by the Boston Central Labor Union building trades department, in protest against Mayor Fitzgerald's failure to give organized labor a hearing before letting the steam-heating contract on the Abraham Lincoln school on Ferdinand street. If necessary, the labor men declare, they will tie up building operations on every school in Boston until the Mayor grants them a hearing.

ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH ON REPUBLICS

"Property Belongs to Man and Not Man to Property."

Ex-President in Address to the French Gives His Ideas on Citizenship.

PARIS, April 23.—Standing before the most learned men of France, Theodore Roosevelt to-day delivered at the Sarbonne the message of one republic to another. It was his first address in Europe. His subject was "The Duties of Citizenship in a Republic."

It was more than the address of a private citizen. But for the lapse of time it would have been the message of a President to the people of a foreign land. The speech was written while Mr. Roosevelt was still in the White House.

DEFENCE OF HUMAN AGAINST PROPERTY RIGHTS.

A striking point of the speech was an interpolation which he made to-day, the only change made since it was first written:

"My position as regards moneyed interests can be put in a few words. In every civilized society property rights must be carefully safeguarded. Ordinarily and in the great majority of cases, human rights and property rights are fundamentally and in the long run identical, but when it clearly appears that there is conflict between them human rights must have the upper hand, for property belongs to man and not man to property."

His speech was typically Rooseveltian and many of his policies were embodied in it including that of anti-race suicide.

Speaking of international relations, he sounded his keynote thus:

"We sincerely and earnestly believe in peace; but if peace and justice conflict, we scorn the man who would not stand for justice though the whole world came in arms against him."

Asserting himself an advocate of individualism Mr. Roosevelt declared that cooperation with the Socialists up to a certain point might be advantageous.

Brilliant Aphorisms Found in Speech

Here are some aphorisms picked from the address:

"There is little place in active life for the timid, good man."

"Good citizenship is not good citizenship if exhibited only in the home."

"We can just as little afford to follow the NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, Philadelphia, April 23.—"It's about time we won a game," declared Manager Lake as he led his team on the field to-day, "and I guess this is about the opportunity we were looking for. Watch us to-day; we will show you fellows something." And with that the manager joined his players in a little preliminary practice.

While the Boston team hasn't won a game since a week ago Friday, the players were full of ginger, and Lake kept them peppered up to the limit. The Phillies felt quite chesty over leading the race for several days, and they are talking of keeping the lead throughout the season.

The weather was fine and a large crowd turned out to witness the battle and yell for the home team.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, April 23.—There was a rush of fans to the yard this afternoon to see the second clash between the Red Sox and Athletics. A trifle chilly, perhaps, but the sun shone brightly and the fans looked forward to a full afternoon's enjoyment.

These Mackmen have demonstrated that they are not to be trifled with; in fact no team can take liberties with any nine Connie Mack puts in the field. The batting and fielding strength of the rival clubs is about equal, so the real test comes down to the pitchers.

There is nothing the matter with the Athletics staff. Plank, Bender, Krause, Morgan, Dygert and others not so prominent are sufficient to carry the visitors along at a merry clip. To pit against the best that Mack offered, Manager Donovan had Cicotte, Collins and Arellanes ready for the fray. It was simply a case of picking the best one.

The diamond had dried out considerably and base stealers had a much better chance of making good than they had yesterday when the base lines were quite muddy.

COURT UPHOLDS WILL IN FAVOR OF GLOVER "TRAGEDY WIDOW"

maining months of his life. He failed to do so. Failing to so do is one of the strongest arguments that the instrument expresses his own wishes.

Statement by Elmore.

"After having carefully weighed all the evidence submitted and given due consideration to the arguments of the several counsel relating to the deduction and conclusion which should be properly be drawn therefrom, I am obliged to find that the contestants have failed to prove that the instrument presented for probate was procured by the improper and undue influence of Lillian Glover, and to find further that it is the last will and testament of Clarence F. Glover."

Samuel D. Elmore, lawyer for Mrs. Glover, gave out this statement this afternoon:

"Judge McIntire has heard and considered the Glover will case with remarkable patience and care. His opinion filed this morning is one of unusual clearness and is worthy of the highest respect. I am satisfied that it will be read with approval by the members of the bar who have followed the case. That the will was sustained was to be expected. Mr. Glover was a young and successful man in business, athletic in build, of strong mentality and not likely to have been the subject of undue influence.

"His will was a normal one, not particularly favoring the wife, but preferring an avowedly worthy brother over others having no claim upon the testator's bounty, just the kind of a will you would expect from Clarence F. Glover. It was his will. It was our best evidence.

"The facts and circumstances surrounding his death, although entirely disassociated with the making of his will, have been seized upon by undeserving brothers as the basis of a contest. From the outset our contention has been that the tragic death of Mr. Glover had nothing to do with the question of the probate of his will, and after hearing the only issue involved, were content to rest our case. The opinion of the Court fully justifies our action."

History of Famous Tragedy.

Clarence F. Glover was shot and killed in his laundry at Waltham on the evening of November 20 last. Three days after that Hattie Le Blanc was found under a bed in the home of the Glovers, she was arrested on the charge of killing Glover, locked up later in the East Cambridge Jail and after that indicted by the Grand Jury for the crime charged against her.

In the meantime the will of Clarence F. Glover had been read and it was found that Mrs. Glover, his widow and his brother Seymour, were the only beneficiaries. Four of his brothers, Arthur, Albert, Norman and William were cut off.

The brothers contested the will and Lawyer J. Scott, acting for them, charged that there had been undue influence brought to bear on Glover to force him to make the will and that Mrs. Glover "caused his death."

The property involved is about $40,000. The will gives Mrs. Glover three-fourths of the income of the estate for her life and one-fourth of the property to Seymour.

Fight Began Three Months Ago.

Nearly three months ago the fight to break the will began before Judge McIntire in the Probate Court of East Cambridge. It was one of the most sensational trials of the kind ever held in New England because of the revelations made relative to the mysterious murder of Glover. During most of the long trial it looked more like a murder hearing than a will contest.

The four brothers took the stand and they testified that Clarence Glover had told them that his life was hell with his wife and that he feared that he would be killed at any time. Mrs. Lillian M. Glover was called to the stand by the contestants. She testified that she knew nothing about the will until shortly before her husband's death and that she did not know its contents until after his death.

From Mrs. Glover the whole story of the murder, so far as she knew anything about it, was drawn. She denied emphatically that she had anything to do with her husband's death. She denied that she ever bought a revolver or that she knew that Hattie Le Blanc was hidden in her house for three days and nights after the tragedy.

Mrs. Glover said that Hattie Le Blanc had shown that she was jealous of the attention of Glover to Mrs. George A. Freeman on the very day that he met his death while they were all at the Waltham football game. She said that she went to the hospital the evening her husband lay dying there, but that she had not gone upstairs to see him because she was not able to stand the ordeal.

Mrs. Glover said that her relations with her husband had been pleasant with the exception of one week in March a year ago when her husband had been paying too much attention to Hattie Le Blanc. She sent Hattie away and after a week, at the insistence of her husband, she brought her back, and from that time up to the time of his death she and her husband had been on good terms.

It was expected that Hattie Le Blanc would testify, as she declared in court she was willing, but her counsel, Melvin M. Johnson, refused to allow her to do so. But Hattie's two sisters, Irene and Lillian, testified and gave the most sensational testimony in the case. Irene swore that Hattie made to her these statements:

"I did not kill Clarence F. Glover.

"Mrs. Lillian M. Glover killed him.

"She Knew I Was There."

"Mrs. Glover knew that I was in the house the three days and nights I was there in hiding from the police.

"I had supper one evening with Mrs. Glover.

"Mrs. Glover made me hide under the bed against my will. I had to do just as she told me."

The two sisters testified that Mrs. Glover told them shortly before Glover was murdered that she did not love him and that she wanted to get rid of him.

Much other testimony was introduced for the purpose of showing that Mrs. Glover conspired to have Glover make the will and then get him out of the way. After nine weeks of the hearings Lawyer Samuel D. Elmore, who represented Mrs. Glover and the will, refused to put in any evidence, declaring that no evidence had been produced to show that the will was the result of undue influence. Lawyer Scott, in summing up, said:

"This will was procured by undue influence by an unprincipled, debased and wanton character. If Hattie Le Blanc was a party to the crime then this woman, Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, shielded the murderer. She secreted her for three days in her house [illegible] and she, too, is guilty of murder in the first degree."

Flies 112 Miles, but Loses $50,000 Prize.

LONDON—After flying 112 miles through the heart of England, Claude Graham White to-day failed to capture the $50,000 prize offered by Lord Northcliffe for an aeroplane flight from here to Manchester, 186 miles. A heavy wind and broken plane forced White to descend after covering 112 miles in 4 hours and 20 minutes. In spite of this failure White's showing is one of the best that has been made in Enbland. Over 1,000,000 persons watched the flight. Henry Farman, the French aviator and plane constructor, who gave White his first lessons in the new science, came from France to see White off. The aeroplane is the first of a new type designed by him, a biplane with a monoplane tail. The terms of the contest call for the journey being made in one day with not more than two stops for petrol.

Theatre Manager Is Accused.

BERLIN—Amazing charges have been made under oath against Herr Zickel, director of the Comedy Theatre, by some of the best-known actresses under his management. Fraulein Fels was the principal witness against him. She swore that she was forced to accept the director's attentions in order to get decent roles. She also lent him money. Baroness von Hochberg testified that she got only $50 a month at first, but "purchased" an improved position.

Royalty at "Poia" Opening.

BERLIN—Berlin is on the edge in anticipation of to-night's premiere of Arthur Nevin's American Indian opera of "Poia" at the Royal Opera, the first American opera ever produced on the European stage. The Crown Prince and Princess and other younger members of the imperial family will occupy the court box.

Writer Gets $1,000 for Leg.

BEVERLY FIREBUG MUTILATED HORSES

BEVERLY, April 23.—It was learned that some person or persons entered the barn of William Cullivan on School street some time on Tuesday night and viciously cut Mr. Cullivan's driving horse by hitting the animal over the back with an iron bar. It is the opinion of many that the serious barn fires were set and that some one has a craze for doing away with horses, as eleven were burned to death at the Warner fire.

WILSON GLAD ALDRICH AND HALE ARE TO GO

NEW YORK, April 23.—Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, is glad Senators Aldrich and Hale are going to retire. He said so as he addressed the gathering in the Methodist Church at Ridgeway, N. J. "We are told," said Dr. Wilson, "that some of the Senators who are leaders in the United States Senate are about to retire. I hope this is so. Their places as leaders will be taken by gentlemen from parts we call the Middle West."

ACCUSED OF ATTACK ON WIFE WITH GUN

George A. Lothrop, forty-six, a furniture salesman, living in Everett, was arraigned before Judge Ely in the Municipal court to-day on the charge of carrying a loaded revolver, and of assaulting his wife, Susan, with the revolver. Lothrop was given six months for carrying the weapon and a year for assault. He appealed and was held in $1,500 for the Superior Court. In court to-day it was alleged that the couple have not been living together for about a year, that last evening Lothrop met his wife in West Springfield street, South End, that he tried to induce his wife to return to him and tha when she refused he fired on her.

SUNDAY, JULY 3, IS EDUCATIONAL DAY

Bishop Lawrence has sent out a circular letter to all the clergy in his diocese to observe Sunday, July 3, as "educational Sunday." The letter says: "In view of the convention of the National Education Association in Boston, bringing to this city many thousands of teachers from all over the country, it seems to me appropriate that the subject of education, and especially of education in relation to religion, should be considered by the clergy on Sunday, July 3.

OLDEST SUBJECT OF KING DEAD, AGED 110

DUBLIN, April 23.—King Edward's oldest subject has died at the age of one hundred and ten. This was Peggy McGurk of Carrickmore, County Tyrone, who was a well-known figure in the district. The old lady died a lonely death, which became known only when the neighbors noticed that she was not moving about as usual. Peggy had been a widow since 1822, her married life only lasting three months. Up to her death she received a small wage as caretaker of the local courthouse, and also received an old-age pension.

400 FRIENDS AT FUNERAL OF MARK TWAIN

NEW YORK, April 23.—This city gave silent tribute to Mark Twain this afternoon. Dressed I nthe white suit which he affected in his last years, the body of the humorist arrived in New York from his Redding, Ct., home this afternoon. It was solemnly placed in the transept of the Brick Presbyterian Church at Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, where it will lie till 2 o'clock Sunday morning. Then it will be taken to Elmira to be buried in the Clemens family plot.

Although the funeral services planned for this afternoon had been announced for 3 o'clock, and but four hundred invitations had been issued to friends of the great philosopher and humorist when the body was taken to the church, a great crowd had surrounded the building by noon. The street was blocked by hundreds who had not received admission cards.

Old Friends Shed Tears.

The body was brought to New York on the Pittsfield and New York express on the New York, New Haven & Hartford line, which made a stop at West Redding especially for the funeral party. At the station there a crowd of friends and neighbors had gathered. Many wept as the man who had been benefactor to an uncounted number started on the final journey.

The body was accompanied from the Connecticut home by Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitch, Mr. Clemens's daughter; her husband, the musician; Albert Bigelow Paine, [illegible] and secretary to Mr. Clemens; Mrs. Kate Leary, his housekeeper; Joseph Lang, a nephew of the late Mrs. Clemens; Henry Lounsbury, superintendent of the Clemens estate, and Dan Beard, artist and neighbor of the humorist and his assistant secretary. At the Grand Central station there were E. E. Loomis, husband of Mark Twain's niece, and Major Frederick T. Leigh, representing his publishers.

Mr. Loomis, who is vice-president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad has placed his private car at the disposal of the funeral party for the trip to Elmira. There was a silent crowd of admirers of Mark Twain at the station, too. As at West Redding, affecting displays of emotion were not scarce.

Plans for Memorial Service.

Mr. Clemens' desire for the utmost simplicity was obeyed both in the journey from Stormfield, his Redding home and in the plans for the services here to-day as well as those for the services for the family which will be held Sunday.

It has been decided by Mr. Clemens' friends, however, that a large memorial service will be held here soon, probably within ten days. The tentative plans for this include a program of music and addresses by colleagues of Mark Twain and distinguished admirers of his works.

BRAIN FOOD FOR OUR READERS

Dr. Frazer's Brain Remarkable.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—The brain of Dr. Persifor Frazer, handwriting expert, chemist, and geologist, was described by Dr. Edward Anthony Spitzka before the Philosophical Society as beautifully modeled and richly convoluted. It weighed 55.73 ounces avoirdupois, which is about 8 ounces more than that of average persons 65 years old.

Animals Have Reasoning Power.

PARIS, April 23.—Professor Lipinay, who has made long researches into the habits of domestic animals, in a lecture at the Dogs' and Cats' Home near Ruell, said that he was convinced that animals' brains have reasoning power. He declared that a simple kind of reasoning and reflex thought must be admitted to exist among them.

The Psychology of Burglary.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Students of the psychology of the burglar must know that a store that is worth robbing is worth robbing before a burglar alarm is installed there. A group of earnest workers entered the establishment of Gluck & Weingold, No. 16 East Thirteenth street, and got away with $5,000 worth of furs. Had they waited another day a burglar alarm would have been in operation.

Check Nearly 100 Years Old.

GREENSBURG, Pa., April 23.—A check almost a hundred years old was presented for payment yesterday to the cashier of the Greensburg Bank. It was found among the papers of William Hillis, who died a week ago, and was dated Greensburg, November 21, 1814.

Woman Slaps Dog Catcher.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., April 23.—Her indignation at seeing her collie Emperor a dog catcher's captive was swelled to fury when Mrs. F. C. Furlow beheld the blue-blooded animal actually tied to a plain, ordinary, common plebeian dog. So she boxed the ears of David Steinfeld, official dog catcher, in front of the Town Hall.

Lizzie Got a Honey Message.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Little Elizabeth White, daughter of Joseph White, pulled the lid off a beehive in Mullica Hill, N. J., and twenty-six of the inmates registered their protests on her face.

Saw No Comet, but Million Stars.

BEVERLY, N. J., April 23.—Anxious to get a view of Halley's comet, Rufus Moffitt of Beverly, N. J., set his alarm clock to awake him. He jumped out of bed, lost his bearings and plunged down a flight of stairs. His arm was broken. He has lost his love for astronomy.

DEPRIVED OF BOY FRIEND, KILLS SELF

Elmer Canada, nineteen years old, drank cyanide of potash in the People's Palace, Washington street, to-day, and died in the City Hospital shortly afterward. Major Joseph Sheppard of the Salvation Army warned Canada not to try to associate with his thirteen-year-old son, Frank.

"I warn you I will report you to the police if I find you here in twenty-four hours," said Major Sheppard to Canada in the basement of the People's Palace to-day.

"Here goes, then," cried the young man, lifting a small bottle containing a white powder to his lips. Mrs. Mary J. Sheppard tried to knock the bottle from the youth's hands, but too late. He leaped to a faucet and drank a little water and fell into a chair. An ambulance was summoned and he died in the City Hospital soon after reaching there.

Canada seemed to be infatuated with Frank Sheppard. Major and Mrs. Sheppard objected to the friendship, thinking Canada too old to go with their boy. A month ago he was warned, and again yesterday.

Frank Sheppard, the boy, was in the carpenter shop in the basement of the People's Palace when his father warned Canada to leave him alone, and he fled shrieking behind Mr. Halloway when the young man drew the bottle of poison and killed himself. He is prostrated now.

POISON WHISKY CASE ARREST

WESTERLEY, R. I., April 23.—As a result of their investigation into the deaths of thirteen men from alcoholic poisoning, the police to-day arrested Patrick Brady, a well-known resident of this town. No charge has been made against Brady. He is merely held as a witness in the Kingston Jail, in default of $500 bail.

Brady was one of the twelve men who were before the coroner at the inquest yesterday. He was in the company of William Sullivan, one of the drugged whiskey victims, shortly before the latter's death. Brady refused to tell the police where the whiskey, which Sullivan drank, had been purchased.

PERMIT ISSUED FOR AIRSHIP HOUSE

WORCESTER, April 23.—Something of a surprise was handed out to Superintendent of Public Buildings George C. Halcott when he asked the nature of the structure which Alphonse J. Dube and his brother, Vincent Dube, asked permission to build.

"I want a building permit for a garage," said Dube.

"Going to have a new place to store the auto in?" asked Superintendent Halcott, interestedly.

"This is an aeroplane garage," answered Dube, but it might do for an auto on a pinch."

As soon as Mr. Halcott recovered from the shock he dragged out his permit blank and filled in the spaces for his first flying machine garage permit. "I suppose I might just as well start issuing these permits now," he said, "for they are bound to come sooner or later."

SPOKE LOVE IN WILL AFTER FIFTY YEARS

FRANKLIN, N. H., April 23.—Half a century of silence concerning his love for his childhood sweetheart was broken when the will of Stephen Bailey, formerly of this town, who perished in a blizzard near Juniper Springs, Col., last Winter, has been probated, and it is found that all his valuable property near Macon City, Ia., has been left to Etty Burbank.

His sweetheart had, unknown to him, married a man by the name of Osgood, and is reported to live in the vicinity of Boston. Every effort is being made to locate Mrs. Osgood, but so far unsuccessfully.

MAKE PLANS FOR NEW CHELSEA BRIDGE

Boston transportation men and wharf owners made strong pleas before Lieutenant-Colonel Burr, United States engineer, for a new structure to replace the Mystic wharf bridge between Charlestown and Chelsea. The cities of Boston and Chelsea and the Boston and Northern Street Railway opposed the project.

The new bridge is part of the plan which Colonel Burr has worked out for the development of the harbor. He has in mind a structure with a 125-foot draw and a higher clearance. The cost has been estimated at $1,700,000.

YOUNG TAFT TO BE REVOLUTION CHILD

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Charley Taft, the President's youngest son, it is said, will shortly become a member of the Children of the American Revolution.

He is now filling out papers for membership and has completed three generations of ancestors. As soon as all the links have been collected he will enter his name upon the membership roll.

PASSOVER FEAST BEGINS TO-NIGHT

With the celebration of the sedar, or family worship, the feast of the Passover will be inaugurated in every Orthodox Jewish home to-night. The feasting term will last eight days, during which there will be special services at the synagogues. The feast commemorates the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage in Egypt and their passing through the Red Sea, where the waters divided to permit of their escape from the pursuing hosts of Egyptians.

CROCKER TRIAL VENUE CHANGE

A hearing was held to-day in the judges' lobby before Judge Wait on the question of whether Charles F. Choate, Jr., representing former City Treasurer George U. Crocker, had the right to file a motion for a change of venue. Crocker is under indictment, charged with inciting and procuring the bribery of jurors. His counsel, for reasons which have not appeared, desire to have the case tried in another county.

District Attorney Pelletier represented the government at the hearing, which was held in private. Henry Hurlburt appeared for Charles H. Leach, who is indicted with being an accessory, and James Sweeney represented Constable John J. Conway, who is indicted jointly with Crocker.

The District Attorney was unable to find any precedent in the laws of Massachusetts which would allow such a motion as Choate wished to offer to be filed.

All the counsel, when they emerged from the judges' lobby, declined to make any statements.

VERMONTERS EAT SUGAR AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Six hundred sons and daughters of Vermont devoured pounds of maple sugar at a party given by the Vermont Society at its ninth annual sugar party. Forty girls wearing white caps served the sugar.

John Barrett, director of the Bureau of American Republics, was the speaker of the evening. He declared he had discovered why the population of Vermont is so small.

"It's because half of her loyal sons and daughters live outside the State," he said. "But wherever they are found they are loyal and true to their native State."

JURY FINDS POISON MURDER EVIDENCE

CHICAGO, April 23.—Charging murder by arsenic poisoning and urging the police to discover those responsible, a coroner's jury returned a verdict on the death of Alexander J. Moody, a pie manufacturer, who died at his West Side home February 20, after eating warmed-up hamburger steak. Mrs. Moody, the widow, and Peter Peterson, also known as Reilly, the family coachman testified before the jury. They could shed no light on Moody's death.

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS TO AMERICANS

Before the University of Sorbonne in Paris, Theodore Roosevelt, former President of the United States, makes an address on "The Duties of Citizenship." Although delivered in Paris, Mr. Roosevelt speaks to the people of this country as directly as though he were addressing an audience in Boston, New York or any other big American city.

Although in the depths of Africa for more than a year, former President Roosevelt kept in pretty close touch with events outside of the jungle, as he had many very observant correspondents in the United States. He not only knows, by this time at least, the trend of American thought in his absence, but while far from the strife and stress of civilized life he has had time to think up some big thoughts of his own and clothe them in vigorous dress.

While lying in his silent camp upon the African veldt and looking at the glittering stars, Colonel Roosevelt was not thinking of the animals that he had slain or proposed to slay, probably, as much as he had in contemplation America, her citizenship and this country's possibilities for the people of the country—including himself.

These stored-up conclusions he makes public to-night and in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to-morrow they will be produced verbatim. This will be a notable feature of to-morrow's paper and to make sure to getting it, it should be ordered at once.

PILGRIMS MAKE MINSTREL HIT

SPRINGFIELD, April 23.—Minstrels extraordinary in the annals of Springfield, the cast made up from members of the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston, disported in the banquet hall of the Henking Hotel to the delectation of members of the Springfield Publicity Club and advertisers from miles around who had heard of the joyous program planned.

A banquet preceded the entertainment, and Springfield and Boston vied in setting the pace for the fun to come. Then, for an hour and a half, while the Boston minstrels in jokes and songs held the stage, there was a continual roar of laughter from the assembled spectators.

Liveliness was the slogan of the entertainers, and there was not a dull moment from start to finish.

BOY WHO DIED AT SHOW IDENTIFIED

Through a visit of his parents to the City Hospital morgue to-day, the body of the fifteen-year-old boy, who died in a moving picture house at No. 2170 Washington street, during a performance, was identified as Joseph Craven of No. 19 Lamont street, Roxbury. According to Medical Examiner Leary, death was due to natural causes. The body was turned over to the family.

$50,000 DAMAGE IN KNIFE PLANT FIRE

FREMONT, O., April 23.—Fire caused more than $50,000 damage here early to-day after an explosion among oils in the plant of the Charity Knife Company. The blaze swept the knife works before the fire apparatus arrived, then gutted several other plants.

Personal Items.

G. POMEROY KEESE, grand nephew of J. Fenimore Cooper, is dead in New York at the home of his son. He was eighty-three years old.

DAVIDSON DALZIEL, British financier and Unionist Member of Parliament, has purchased the Standard, both morning and evening editions, from C. A. Pearson.

PRINCE TAO POY LAKE, uncle of the Emperor of China, has arrived in San Francisco, accompanied by a large suite. He comes to study American army methods.

LADY SARAH WILSON, who sped from San Francisco to attend the Drexel-Gould wedding in New York, is on the Atlantic en route to her home in England. Her trunks were delayed and she did not go to the wedding at all.

SENATOR DEPEW is seventy-six years old to-day. Mrs. Depew surprised him with a dinner party given at their residence in Washington last night. To-night the Montauk Club of Brooklyn will give its customary birthday dinner to the Senator.

THE GRAND DUCHESS ELIZABETH, widow of Grand Duke Sergius and sister of Empress Alexandra, took the veil of a nun in Moscow to-day. She will devote herself to the hospital of the Woman's Refuge, which was founded after the assassination of her husband, February 17, 1905, by a bomb.

GIRLS TAKE PRIZES ON AMATEUR NIGHT

The prize winners at the Columbia Theatre last night, out of a large field of amateurs, were Annie Murray and Helen Barry, singers of popular ballads. The fun was, as usual, of the swiftest, most hilarious sort from the minute the trick curtain was dropped until the final shower of old hats and the flight of the famous "Shark."

CHICAGO GRATEFUL FOR BOSTON TABLET

Walter M. Lowney, chairman of the Trade Extension Committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, has received a letter from Homer A. Stillwell, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, thanking the Boston organization for the bronze tablet recently presented to his association. In his letter Stillwell voices the hope that the gift will lead to a closer intimacy between the two great cities.

FIRE AT CONCORD RUINS 3 STORES

CONCORD, N. H., April 23.—Fire early to-day ruined the Lee Brothers block, ruining the stock of Clark Brothers' dry goods and millinery store, the Capitol restaurant and Burgess & Struthers's barber shop. Hard work by all the fire companies was necessary to prevent its spread to a row of wooden buildings at the rear of the building and the bank building at one side. The damage is estimated at $35,000.

FIND STRONG BOX HELD ONLY 2 CENTS

NEW YORK, April 23.—When the strong box in the vaults of the Fidelity Trust Company, Newark, held by George Forman, the missing city auditor of Newark, was opened its sole contents were a two-cent piece and an empty pasteboard jewelry box. The entry was made under a writ of attachment granted to David M. Wickham of Newark, who, with his wife, had given Forman $21,000 for investment and has been able to find only $7,500 so applied.

ROOSEVELT STIRS FRANCE WITH MILITANT SPEECH

"We must learn to combine intensity of conviction with a broad tolerance of difference of conviction."

"The true patriot is as jealous of the national honor as a gentleman of his own honor."

"The greatest of all curses is the curse of sterility."

"It is not the critic who counts; the credit belongs to the man actually in the arena."

"The success of republics like yours and ours means the glory, and our failure the despair of mankind, and the question of the quality of the individual citizen is supreme."

All officialdom was at the Sorbonne, including the entire cabinet, and the foremost of France's men of learning. Academicians of all rank, including the Forty Immortals, shared in the places of honor, and for once the brightness of uniforms was not the ascendant note. It was a day of scholarship. Indeed throughout weeks Paris has been speaking of this as "University Day." It is known, too, as "Latin Quarter Day," the Sorbonne lying in that famous section of Paris.

The largest hall in the handsome buildings of the Sorbonne, seating 3,000, was crowded long before the time set for the appearance of the former President. The crowd swelled rapidly and even the heavy force of police under the personal direction of Prefect Lepine, had difficulty in keeping order and maintaining a right of way through the throngs for the distinguished guests and the holders of admission cards. Nine hundred English-speaking students had been selected to hear the address.

So terrific had been the demand for seats for two months that a score of extra clerks had been kept busy sending refusals, and M. Liard, rector, suffered a breakdown. He recovered for to-day's event, however.

The Sorbonne, oldest and most famous of French colleges, dates from 1253. It now comprises the three faculties of theology, science and literature of the Academy of Paris. Consecrated in 1793, it was reopened by Napoleon in 1808, and between 1884 and 1893 nearly $5,000,000 was spent in new buildings, in one of which Mr. Roosevelt spoke to-day.

Roosevelt's Speech on Citizenship.

Mr. Roosevelt said in part:

Strange and impressive associations rise in the mind of a man from the New World who speaks before this august body in this ancient institution of learning. Before his eyes pass the shadows of mighty kings and warlike nobles, of great masters of law and theology; through the shining dust of the dead centuries he sees crowded figures that tell of the power and learning and splendor of times gone by; and he sees also the innumerable host of humble students to whom clerkship meant emancipation, to whom it was well nigh the only outlet from the dark thraldom of the Middle Ages.

This was the most famous university of mediaeval Europe at a time when no one dreamed that there was a New World to discover. Its services to the cause of human knowledge already stretched far back into the remote past at the time when my forefathers, three centuries ago, were among the sparse bands of traders, plowmen, woodchoppers and fisherfolk who, in hard struggle with the iron unfriendliness of the Indian-haunted land, were laying the foundations of what has now become the giant republic of the West.

Return to Ideals Follows Wealth.

The pioneer days pass; the stump-dotted clearings expand into vast stretches of fertile farm land; the stockaded clusters of log cabins change into towns; the hunters of game, the fellers of trees, the rude frontier traders and tillers of the soil, the men who wander all their lives long through the wilderness as the heralds and harbingers of an oncoming civilization, themselves vanish before the civilization for which they have prepared the way. The children of their successors and supplanters, and then their children and children's children, change and develop with extraordinary rapidity. The conditions accentuate vices and virtues, energy and ruthlessness, all the good qualities and all the defects of an intense individualism, self-reliant, self-centred, far more conscious of its rights than of its duties, and blind to its own shortcomings. To the hard materialism of the frontier days succeeds the hard materialism of an industrialism even more intense and absorbing than that of the older nations; although these themselves have likewise already entered on the age of complex and predominating industrial civilization.

As the country grows, its people, who have won success in so many lines, turn back to try to recover the possessions of the mind and the spirit, which perforce their fathers threw aside in order better to wage the first rough battles for the continent their children inherit. The leaders of thought and of action grope their way forward to a new life, realizing, sometimes dimly, sometimes clear-sightedly, that the life of material gain, whether for a nation or an individual, is of value only as a foundation, only as there is added to it the uplift that comes from devotion to loftier ideals. The new life thus sought can in part be developed afresh from what is round about in the New World; but it can be developed in full only by freely drawing upon the treasure houses of the Old World, upon the treasures stored in the ancient abodes of wisdom and learning, such as this where I speak to-day. It is a mistake for any nation merely to copy another; but it is an even greater mistake, it is a mistake for any nation merely to copy another; but it is an even greater mistake, it is a proof of weakness in any nation, not to be anxious to learn from another, and willing and able to adapt that learning to the new national conditions and make it fruitful and productive therein. It is for us of the New World to sit at the feet of the Gamaliel of the Old; then, if we have the right stuff in us, we can show that Paul in his turn can become a teacher as well as a scholar.

Readiness for War Every Man's Duty.

In the next place, the good man should be both a strong and a brave man; that is, he should be able to fight, he should be able to serve his country as a soldier if the need arises. There are well-meaning philosophers who declaim against the unrighteousness of war. They are right only if they lay all their emphasis upon the unrighteousness. War is a dreadful thing, and unjust war is a crime against humanity. But it is such a crime because it is unjust, not because it is war. The choice must ever be in favor of righteousness, and this whether the alternative be peace or whether the alternative be war. The question must not be merely, is there to be peace or war? The question must be, is right to prevail? Are the great laws of righteousness once more to be fulfilled? And the answer from a strong and virile people must be, "Yes," whatever the cost. Every honorable effort should always be made to avoid war, just as every honorable effort should always be made by the individual in private life to keep out of a brawl, to keep out of trouble; but no self-respecting individual, no self-respecting nation, can or ought to submit to wrong.

Finally, even more important than ability to work, even more important than ability to fight at need, is it to remember that the chief of blessings for any nation is that it shall leave its seed to inherit the land. It was the crown of blessings in Biblical times; and it is the crown of blessings now. The greatest of all curses is the curse of sterility, and the severest of all condemnations should be that visited upon willful sterility. The first essential in any civilization is that the man and the woman shall be father and mother of healthy children, so that the race shall increase and not decrease. If this is not so, if through no fault of the society there is failure to increase, it is a great misfortune. If the failure is due to deliberate and willful fault, then it is not merely a misfortune, it is one of those crimes of ease and self-indulgence, of shrinking from pain and effort and risk, which in the long run Nature punishes more heavily than any other. If we of the great republics, if we, the free people who claim to have emancipated ourselves from the thraldom of wrong and error, bring down on our heads the curse that comes upon the willfully barren, then it will be an idle waste of breath to prattle of our achievements, to boast of all that we have done. No refinement of life, no delicacy of taste, no material progress, no sordid heaping up of riches, no sensuous development of art and literature, can in any way compensate for the loss of the great fundamental virtues; and of these great fundamental virtues, the greatest is the race's power to perpetuate the race.

Socialism Spells Sheer Destruction.

Character must show itself in the man's performance both of the duty he owes himself and of the duty he owes the State. The man's foremost duty is owed to himself and his family; and he can do this duty only by earning money, by providing what is essential to material well-being; it is only after this has been done that he can hope to build a higher superstructure on the solid material foundation; it is only after this has been done that he can help in movements for the general well-being. He must pull his own weight first, and only after this can his surplus strength be of use to the general public. It is not good to excite that bitter laughter which expresses contempt; and contempt is what we feel for the being whose enthusiasm to benefit mankind is such that he is a burden to those nearest him; who wishes to do great things for humanity in the abstract, but who cannot keep his wife in comfort or educate his children.

Much of the discussion about Socialism and Individualism is entirely pointless, because of failure to agree on terminology. It is not good to be the slave of names. I am a strong individualist by personal habit, inheritance, and conviction; but it is a mere matter of common sense to recognize that the State, the community, the citizens acting together, can do a number of things better than if they were left to individual action.

The individualism which finds its expression in the abuse of physical force is checked very early in the growth of civilization, and we of to-day should in our turn strive to shackle or destroy that individualism which triumphs by greed and cunning, which exploits the weak by craft instead of ruling them by brutality. We ought to go with any man in the effort to bring about justice and the equality of opportunity, to turn the tool user more and more into the tool owner, to shift burdens so that they can be more equitably borne. The deadening effect on any race of the adoption of a logical and extreme socialistic system could not be overstated; it would spell sheer destruction; it would produce grosser wrong and outrage, fouler immorality, than any existing system. But this does not mean that we may not with great advantage adopt certain of the principles professed by some given set of men who happen to call themselves Socialists; to be afraid to do so would be to make a mark of weakness on our part.

Visionary Often a Menace to Reform.

The impracticable visionary is far less often the guide and precursor than he is the embittered foe of the real reformer, of the man who, with stumblings and shortcomings, yet does in some shape, in practical fashion, give effect to the hopes and desires of those who strive for better things. Woe to the empty phrase-maker, to the empty idealist, who, instead of making ready the ground for the man of action, turns against him when he appears and hampers him as he does the work!

We can just as little afford to follow the doctrinaires of an extreme individualism as the doctrinaires of an extreme socialism. Individual initiative, so far from being discouraged, should be stimulated; and yet we should remember that, as society develops and grows more complex, we continually find that things which once it was desirable to leave to individual initiative can, under the changed conditions, be performed with better results by common effort. It is quite impossible, and equally undesirable, to draw in theory a hard and fast line which shall always divide the two sets of cases. This every one who is not cursed with the pride of the closet philosopher will see, if he will only take the trouble to think about some of our commonest phenomena.

Nevertheless, while laying all stress on this point, while not merely acknowledging but insisting upon the fact that there must be a basis of material well-being for the individual as for the nation, let us with equal emphasis insist that this material well-being represents nothing but the foundation, and that the foundation, though indispensable, is worthless unless upon it is raised the superstructure of a higher life.

That is why I decline to recognize the mere multi-millionaire, the man of mere wealth, as an asset of value to any country; and especially as not an asset to my own country. If he has earned or uses his wealth in a way that makes him of real benefit, of real use—and such is often the case—why, then he does become an asset of worth. But it is the way in which it has been earned or used, and not the mere fact of wealth, that entitles him to the credit.

There is need in business, as in most other forms of human activity, of the great guiding intelligences. Their places cannot be supplied by any number of lesser intelligences. It is a good thing that they should have ample recognition, ample reward.

But we must not transfer our admiration to the reward instead of to the deed rewarded; and if what should be the reward exists without the service having been rendered, then admiration will come only from those who are mean of soul. The truth is that, after a certain measure of tangible material success or reward has been achieved, the question of increasing it becomes of constantly less importance compared to other things that can be done in life. It is a bad thing for a nation to raise and to admire a false standard of success; and there can be no falser standard than that set by the deification of material well-being in and for itself.

Class Distinction a National Peril.

Remember always that the same measure of condemnation should be extended to the arrogance which would look down upon or crush any man because he is poor, and to the envy and hatred which would destroy a man because he is wealthy. The overbearing brutality of the man of wealth or power, and the envious and hateful malice directed against wealth or power, are really at root mere different manifestations of the same quality, merely the two sides of the same shield. The man who, if born to wealth and power, exploits and ruins his less fortunate brethren, is at heart the same as the greedy and violent demagogue who excites those who have not property to plunder those who have.

The gravest wrong upon his country is inflicted by that man, whatever his station, who seeks to make his countrymen divide primarily on the line that separates class from class, occupation from occupation, men of more wealth from men of less wealth, instead of remembering that the only safe standard is that which judges each man on his worth as a man, whether he be rich or poor, without regard to his profession or to his station in life. Such is the only true democratic test, the only test that can with propriety be applied in a republic.

World Not Yet Ready for Perpetual Peace.

As yet, as a rule, each nation is of necessity obliged to judge for itself in matters of vital importance between it and its neighbors, and actions must of necessity, where this is the case, be different from what they are where, as among private citizens, there is an outside force whose action is all-powerful and must be invoked in any crisis of importance. It is the duty of wise statesmen, gifted with the power of looking ahead, to try to encourage and build up every movement which will substitute or tend to substitute some other agency for force in the settlement of international disputes. It is the duty of every honest statesman to try to guide the nation so that it shall not wrong any other nation. But as yet the great civilized peoples, if they are to be true to themselves and to the cause of humanity and civilization, must keep ever in mind that in the last resort they must possess both the will and the power to resent wrong-doing from others. The men who sanely believe in a lofty morality preach righteousness; but they do not preach weakness, whether among private citizens or among nations. We believe that our ideals should be high, but not so high as to make it impossible measurably to realize them. We sincerely and earnestly believe in peace; but if peace and justice conflict, we scorn the man who would not stand for justice though the whole world came in arms against him.

Kate Mueller, Girl Companion of Wolter, Sketched in Court

WOLTER, RAILROADED TO CHAIR, GUARDED AGAINST SUIC

NEW YORK, April 23.—Albert Wolter, nineteen years old, will be sentenced Wednesday for the murder of fifteen-year-old Ruth Wheeler, of which he was convicted late last night after the jury had been out three hours.

Convicted in the fastest murder trial ever held in the State of New York, Wolter arose to-day in his cell without a trace of worry. The sleek air which has marked him since his arrest was unchanged. There was little indication of bravado in his manner. It was rather a continuation of the moral and emotional lethargy with which he received the verdict that will probably send him to the electric chair.

Nevertheless, the guard over him was doubled to-day to prevent any attempt at suicide. A turnkey has an eye upon him at every moment. He was denied even a spoon and tin cup.

Swiftest Murder Trial.

Had Justice Warren Foster, who heard the case in the Court of General Sessions, not granted the plea of Attorney W. D. Scott, Wolter's attorney, for a stay of execution till Wednesday, the prisoner would probably have been sentenced to taken to Sing Sing within a mont time of the murder. As it is, t stands in the legal annals of Ne as the swiftest murder trial yet re

Here is the record of the twenty-eigh days of the remarkable case: March 24 Ruth Wheeler murdered; March 25, Wolte arrested for abduction; March 26, the girl's half-burned body is found; March 27, Wolter discharged on charge of abduction and rearrested, charged with murder in the first degree; March 30, Wolter indicted; March 31, arraigned in Supreme Court, date of trial set; April 18, trial starts in Genera Sessions; April 19, jury chosen; April 22 Wolter convicted; length of trial, five days; witnesses examined, forty-eight; exhibits in evidence, seventy-nine; summing up three hours; judge's charge, twenty-six minutes; jury out three hours, twenty-three minutes; actual deliberation, two hours eight minutes.

"Trusty" in His Cell.

The man placed in the cell with Wolter in place of the prisoner who had been with him there before and during the trial, was one of the young men in the Tombs know as "trusties." This prisoner has had the confidence of the Tombs officials for some time, and it is said can be depended should Wolter try to kill himself. regarded all these precautions wi ference. He replied to a few que to him by Deputy Warden Jo breakfast to-day with all his ol He said he had slept well and th comfortable.

"This young fellow," said Depu den Jones, "either has the most able nerve of any prisoner who h been in the Tombs, or else he has lutely no realization of what has pened to him and what is to come.

He shows no emotion of any sort, and his unconcern remains wholly undisturbed. He is the most remarkable case in my experience."

'ROYAL ROOTER' HELD IN BAIL DEFAULT

Michael J. Regan, known in the baseball world as the "Royal Rooter," is held at the Charlestown jail in default of $18,000 bail, on a charge of misappropriating bonds valued at $13,000 belonging to the estate of the late Harriette Brown. He was arrested in Providence and after waiving extradition was brought to Boston and arraigned before Judge Wentworth in the Municipal Court. When Mrs. Brown died she made him the legatee of her entire estate, excepting bequests of $1 to each of her sisters. The will was disallowed in the Probate Court.

BOSTON & MAINE TO INCREASE FARES

Passenger rates on the Boston & Maine will be materially increased on and after June 1, according to a report in railroad circles to-day. It is understood that this has become necessary owing to the large number of employes who have received an increase in wages during the past few months.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

LOCAL MARKET DULL AT CLOSE

The local market closed dull, with Lake the weak feature, showing a loss of 3¾ points. While the coppers could not be called weak, they showed fractional losses in sympathy with the selling of Lake.

Extreme dulness was the feature of the early trading, and during the first half-hour a steady improvement was shown, while arbitrage houses bought stocks, especially Steel and Amalgamated. But when this support was withdrawn a quiet and weak tone developed, and what new orders appeared were mostly to sell.

Few of the public seem to have the courage to even invest their money, to say nothing of making speculative commitments, and as a result it requires very little pressure to influence prices downward because of the apathy that is oppressive.

During the last half-hour some long stock was brought out as a result of small speculative holders not wanting to carry their stock over the holiday, and, though the trading was in small lots, closing prices were generally lower.

COTTON MARKET FACES A CRISIS

LIVERPOOL, April 23.—The failure of at least four large cotton firms is to-day regarded by the trade in general as certain because of the Knight, Yancey & Co. failure at Decatur, Ala., and the discovery of forged bills of lading.

Although officials of the Liverpool cotton association to-day gave optimistic views of the situation and declared that all of the thirty firms involved were able to weather the storm, the view on the street put the situation in a graver light. The latest reports indicate that the total losses throughout Europe will be as high as $5,000,000. The exact amount, however, is still undetermined and the arrival of the boats supposed to carry cotton shipments is awaited with the greatest anxiety.

POISON CANDY STORY ALARMS HYDE DEFENCE

ANSAS CITY, Mo., April 23.—The ggle of a woman witness against all the wiles, artifices, tricks and subtle threats of a clever lawyer drew hundreds of women early to-day to the court of Judge Latshaw. Many were turned away after they had struggled in vain to enter that they might hear Attorney Frank Walsh attempt to shatter the damaging story of Miss Anna Houlihan, a trained nurse, that his client, Dr. B. Clark Hyde on trial for the murder of Colonel Thomas H. Swope, presented Stella Swope with a box of poisoned candy. The nurse had told her story in a calm, unaffected manner. She said that Dr. Hyde had given a box of candy to Stella and that the girl became ill with typhoid fever seven days later. Others ate of the candy, and they, too, showed symptoms of the deadly disease.

It has been established that Dr. Hyde had in his possession quantities of the germ culture for supposed experimental purposes. The State will seek, it is said, to prove by subsequent witnesses that members of this germ colony were found in candy submitted for analysis.

e testimony created a sensation. The g of Miss Houlihan at this time was cted. Her testimony was of such er that Dr. Hyde and his attorneys ed up the greater part of last night over her testimony seeking for flaws. Logan D. Swope, mother of the de- nt's wife, will not be called to the ss stand until later. She is suffering nervousness. She was to have testi- to-day.

CARRY LIQUOR CASE TO SUPREME COURT

A question of law which will have to be settled by the Supreme Court came up before Judge Hitchcock in the Norfolk County Superior Court to-day when Joseph Fostello of Quincy, an expressman, was charged with violating the Quincy liquor law. The law requires expressmen delivering liquor in a no-license city to carry ok with the consignment in it. Fostello was arrested in February with a load of bottle goods. It had not consigned to any party and Fostello no book when asked by an officer. Hitchcock ordered the jury to bring verdict of guilty and advised counsel ostello to carry the matter to the Court on a question of law.

STORM WRECKS LAKE STEAMER; 57 NEAR DEATH

CHICAGO, April 23.—The steamer Iowa, one of the largest passenger boats of the Goodrich lines, was hurled against the west shore of Lake Michigan and beached, four miles south of Racine, to-day, in one of the worst storms of the year.

Twenty-five passengers started the trip with the Iowa. The crew consisted of thirty-two men. Within an hour after the steamer went ashore the government life savers were on the beach and made repeated efforts to reach the steamer, but were driven back by the heavy surf.

A number of other boats are being tossed about on the lake or have found refuge in other ports, while lake traffic is demoralized generally by one of the severest gales and snow storms that has centered about this region in years.

HAVOC IS WROUGHT TO VEGETATION BY WESTERN BLIZZARD

CHICAGO, April 23.—A thirty-mile an hour gale, accompanied by blinding, stinging snow and a rapid drop in temperature, struck Chicago and other cities in the Central West to-day. Vegetation was frozen, fruit trees suffered and general havoc followed close on the heels of the storm, which is the worst that has visited this section at this season. Ice formed at many places. The loss is placed in the millions.

ROURKE NAMED AS STREET HEAD

Louis K. Rourke of Abington, for several years assistant division engineer of the Panama Canal has been appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald to the position of Superintendent of Streets to succeed Guy C. Emerson, the present head of the Street Department. He will take up his new duties on or about May 15.

The Mayor also decided to retain Superintendent of Streets Emerson in the city's employ if the latter will consent to remain at City Hall, and has offered Superintendent Emerson a position in an advisory capacity to the head of the Street Department.

In addition to the Rourke appointment the Mayor appointed former Assessor Samuel H. Borofsky to the position of Children's Institutions trustee to succeed Lee M. Friedman, and sent a notice of the appointment to Surveyor of the Port Jeremiah J. McCarthy as Fire Commissioner, to the Civil Service Commission.

FIND TWO MISSING GIRL IMMIGRANTS

Baron Don Rosentwist, Swedish consul in Boston, to-day received a telephone message stating that the two seventeen-year-old Swedish girls, believed to have been lured away by a woman engaged in the "white slave traffic," have been found in Everett and are now in the hands of friends. The missing girls are Gota Sterner and Ida Hagberg. They arrived on the White Star Liner Megantic on Wednesday, and, although a vigilant search had been conducted by the police and the Swedish consul, they were not found until to-day.

ARRESTS ARE LIKELY IN MALDEN FIRES

Arrests are expected as a result of investigations made to-day by Fire Marshal Neal into the fire in the house of Abraham Lusinetsky, at No. 62 Warren avenue, Malden. The fire marshal is being aided by Chief Foley and Inspector Greenleaf of the Malden police.

During the past three months a number of fires of mysterious cause have occurred in the neighborhood of the Lusinetsky house and the police believe a number of them to have been incendiary.

DIPHTHERIA CLOSES COUNTY JAIL

ALFRED, Me., April 23.—A part of the jail has been quarantined and one school has been closed on account of an outbreak of diphtheria here. Of the four cases that have developed, two of the patients are Earl and Paul Emery, sons of Deputy Sheriff Emery. The part of the jail to which the boys have had access has been placed in quarantine. The Emery boys are pupils in the school room of Miss Jane Drew, who is also ill with the disease. Miss Francis Strutter, a pupil in the ninth grade of the same school, is the fourth patient. The school has been closed.

CUSTOMS CLERK HELD ON FRAUD CHARGE

NEW YORK, April 23.—George E. Bedell, who was chief clerk for James F. Vail, former deputy surveyor of the port, and who had charge of the weighing department, was arrested by United States Marshal Henkel on an indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the Government out of custom duties on sugar, macaroni, figs, cheese and other imported merchandise.

Marshal Henkel also arrested two of three alleged co-conspirators of Bedell's. They are Charles D. Drew and Charles H. Wardwell, former assistant customs weighers. Each was held in $5,000 bail.

WILL BE A CANDIDATE JUST FOR REVENGE

Thomas H. Bates, formerly a State Senator in California, but for several years a resident of this city, announced that he intended to be an independent candidate for the House of Representatives in Ward 21 in opposition to Representative Knight. The unfavorable report in the Senate and House on Mr. Bates's bill to make available to all parties evidence collected in connection with an accident caused him to declare himself a candidate. He says he also intends to speak in Chelsea next Fall against Representative Warren. Mr. Bates blames Knight and Warren with defeating his bill.

New Edison Records for MAY

On Sale April 25th

THIS month's Edison Record list is remarkable in that it introduces two new Grand Opera stars of the Manhattan Opera House, New York—Carmen Melis, prima donna; and Gustav Huberdeau, basso; besides records by Marguerita Sylva, Blanche Arral and Riccardo Martin. But not only from the standpoint of Grand Opera is this month's list remarkable. The biggest hit of the season, "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" is on the Amberol (four minute) list and Billy Murray's newest success "He's a College Boy" is a head-liner from the Standard (two minute) list. And these are just samples—your dealer will play anything on this list, you wish to hear, on the Edison Phonograph.

JEFFRIES WILL ENTER RING WEIGHING 220 POUNDS, SAYS EXPERT

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

JEFFRIES TRAINING CAMP, Rowardennan, Cal., April 23.—When Jim Jeffries started on his run to Boulder Creek this morning he tipped the beam at exactly 228 pounds. This information was given out by Farmer Burns who haled the former champion into the darkest recesses of the gymnasium last night, and after putting him on the scales got busy with the tape and recorded a brand new set of measurements.

According to the figures given out by the veteran trainer, Jeffries stands just six feet one and one-half inches in height, measures 18 inches around the neck, 45 inches around the chest, normal, and 50½ inches expanded; 36 inches around the waist, 26 inches thigh, 17 inches calf, 10 inches ankle, 16 inches biceps, 18 inches forearm and 8¼ inches wrist.

This is the first time Jeffries's official weight has been given out and the fight fans received the announcement with considerable satisfaction.

Manager Berger declared several days ago that Jeff would not find it necessary to take off more than ten pounds before July 4.

Will Weigh 220 Pcunds at Ring Side.

If this can be taken as official the former champion will enter the ring weighing in the neighborhood of 220 pounds.

An indication of the bitter animosity that may be aroused by the negroes of the country against Bob Armstrong, himself a colored man, for helping Jeffries condition for his fight against the black champion, was conveyed to Armstrong this morning in an anonymous postal card which he received from the South.

In a brief but vindictive message Armstrong is warned that he will be killed if he ever ventures to return to the South. The postal reads:

"Bainbridge, Ga.—You are a dead man if you ever come South for training a white man to beat Jack Johnson."

Armstrong refuses to take the threat seriously.

"I don't think any of them niggers down there will do much to me," said he. "Anyhow, I don't expect to visit Bainbridge in the near future."

Jeffries was up bright and early this morning prepared to put in an even more strenuous day then he did yesterday. He started off with a nine-mile run and followed up with an hour's gymnasium work before luncheon.

Jeffries showed great vim in his boxing bout with Armstrong, and there were times during the entertainment when the darkey probably wished he was in Bainbridge.

Papke Next One in Line.

One of the next things on the program will be a boxing siesta between Jeff and Bill Papke. When it is coming off no one will say, but it is certain the choice morsel will be handed out very shortly.

Chovnski began light work to-day and expects to take a regular part in the training work by the first of next week.

Jeffries put in about the most vigorous morning's work yesterday he has done since going into ring training. And to even up the sum total of exercise for the twenty-four hours, he turned the latter half of the day into an afternoon of leisure. From lunch time until nearly 4 o'clock he loafed on the porch of his cottage and down on the river bank and then went off with Harry Green with the bamboo poles for a short fishing excursion.

The finishing of the dam has raised the water several feet on the river, and Jeff spent a care-free couple of hours in the heat of the day lying on the shady bank and watching boat races and swimming. He took his friend, Jack Melville of New York, out for a shot row, but could not go in for a swim as he said he wanted to do because the camp has not a bathing suit big enough to fit him.

The day began as usual with the ten-mile run on the road. Melville was a new member of the running squad, but Joe Choynski could not go as he had planned, because his training clothes are not here. Choyaski will break into training work gradually. When he will first spar with Jeffries is uncertain, for the big fellow may call upon him without notice any moment.

Jeff Goes Through Stunts.

Following the custom, after breakfast rest Jeff went to the gym and took a long spell at the chest weights, punching bag and skipping the rope. Then he pulled on the gloves for five rounds of boxing, taking on Bob Armstrong and Sam Berger. Several games of handball finished up a long, hard morning of work, through the result of which Jeff showed by his vigor and eagerness that he was feeling good.

"I could go into the ring right now and fight forty or fifty rounds and when I came out my legs would be in better shape than they were when I went in," said Jeff while pulling off his gloves after the sparring.

"The only place I don't feel right is in my shoulders. I am stiff around there, but the heavy running on the road has probably caused it. But that will be gone pretty soon. That kink in my neck has gone. I let Bob Armstrong catch me a couple of drives on the neck on purpose. I wanted to see if I could feel the cramp again. There is not a trace of it left, but it bothered me so badly for a while that I could not raise my right arm."

Armstrong showed more cleverness and quickness than he has before. He tipped the scales at 227 pounds yesterday with his clothes on. Six feet four inches is his height and he does not carry a pound of excess weight.

Bob Boxes Jeff.

The big fellow and Bob began sparring very lightly. They feinted, led, blocked and ducked, each exchanging a few blows heavier than a tap in the first round. Only one clinch occurred and that as time was called.

Jeff was seeking accuracy and control more than anything else. The second round was a bit livelier, and by the third round the two fighters were boxing away at a smashing good clip.

"That was a good one" cried Jeffries after Bob had caught him a good left jolt on the jaw. Then he called to him to come on, and the big fellow shot his blows in so fast and straight that Bob turned and ran.

It was the only time in the three-round go that he fled. He stood up to Jeffries for the rest of the bout and at the end dropped his hands to his sides with a big [illegible]. Then Jeff [illegible] and puffing very little called for Berger.

Before and After the Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

It was to be expected that Connie Mack would shove Krause at the Speed Boys. The left-hander seems to have the goat of our fellows and the games he won against us last season are too numerous to count. He can pitch some, as his record last year shows, but he is about the luckiest man this side of the pearly gate, if yesterday's set-to is to be taken for an example.

Twice on bunts the ball popped right in his hands and once he was able to make a double play of it. Then again in the opening inning with the bases full and no one out Stahl drove a terrific liner which Collins couldn't have touched if he tried, and another double play followed. A foot or two either way and the drive might have been a home run and a clean-up, it was going so fast. Such is baseball. When the other fellows have this kind of hard luck, we don't say much about it, but when the boot is on the other leg we have to mention these things. Funny how baseball works, isn't it?

We have the Red Sox and the White Sox and after looking the Athletics over it was suggested by a fan that they ought to be dubbed the Convict Sox. The players all look as though they had just escaped from Sing Sing. What Salem street tailor made their clothes, anyway? Talk about your meal bags! They beat us in the first encounter and we must get bunk by saying mean things about their clothes. Did you notice those threequarter effect sweaters?

Speaker has been doing so many stunts out in centre field that Hooper has been lost sight of. But the little Californian pulled down a fly ball yesterday and made one of the best catches ever seen on the grounds. The drive was from the bat of McInnis, the Gloucester boy, and Hooper got it with one hand after a furious sprint away over in Speaker's territory.

It was exciting work in the seventh. The bases had been filled on a fumble, a hit, and a pass. The Red Sox infield played in close. Hall got the first man at the plate, McConnell killed the second and the third man went out, McConnell to Stahl, retiring the side without a tally.

With Captain Harry Lord signed up for three years and Tris Speaker for two seasons, President Taylor will not have to worry about two of his stars for awhile. Lord signed yesterday and Speaker closed his deal in New York last week.

The score board boy got wise and kept his ladder out of the way. Thanks.

Those Tigers look as though they will be just as hard to beat as ever. Twice they have trimmed the Clevelands on the latter's new grounds.

AUSTRALIAN RUNS FAST.

A. Postle, the professional champion sprinter of Australia, and Donaldson, champion of South Africa, contested in three sprint races in Johannesburg, S. A., recently. Postle won the fifty-yard in 5⅕ seconds, while Donaldson won the sixty-five-yard in 6⅗ seconds and the seventy-five-yard in 7⅘ seconds.

JEFF'S LIFE STORY

TAD'S story of the life and battles of Jim Jeffries, which has been printed serially in the Evening American, will be a feature of the Sunday American. In the instalment which will be printed to-morrow Tad tells of the early life of the man who will attempt to regain the world's heavyweight title from Jack Johnson on July 4.

TUFFTS WIN GAME FROM LEHIGH BOYS

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., April 23.—In a game which for six innings was a pretty contest, Tufts defeated Lehigh, 5 to 1. The seventh proved fatal for Lehigh, Wolframs being touched up for two doubles and the same number of singles, which netted four runs.

Up to this time the game was either team's, both pitchers playing steady ball. Croll's error and Richards' slow fielding of Dustin's single to right field allowed Roberts to score Tufts's first run in the third inning. A comedy of errors gave Lehigh its only score in the fifth.

NO RINDGE-E. H. S. GAME.

The Interscholastic League game scheduled for this afternoon between English High and Rindge has been cancelled by the Cambridge school. It was thought that Rindge had made all arrangements for the use of Tufts Oval, but yesterday it was learned that the school had not engaged the grounds and consequently the game was called off.

LIFE AND BATTLES OF JAMES J. JEFFRIES

By TAD.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Jeffries came East to show sporting men in these parts that he was entitled to a fight for the world's championship, and to do this he agreed to take on Bob Armstrong and Steve O'Donnell, ten rounds each in the same ring, and to beat both.

This card was put on in New York and so well was the affair advertised that an enormous crowd turned out to see the California giant snuff out the lights of the two heavies he had agreed to box.

Then came the afterclap—the most distressing event in the whole life of Jeffries. He failed to make good. Armstrong lasted the limit and at the end seemed as good physically as Jeffries himself. The fight with O'Donnell was called off, the explanation being that Jeff had injured an arm in the first contest.

There is not the slightest doubt now that the big fellow had really hurt his arm, but that evening when thousands of Easterners were turned out of the club after seeing but half the show they had paid their good money for there was an awful howl. Some charged that he had found the job too tough for him and had used the injured arm excuse to get out of the thing.

Jeffries and everyone connected with him were roasted pretty severely for a day or two. But the boilermaker submitted his arm to inspection by some of the best physicians in the East and thus proved that he had really been injured—and the arm has never been as good as before that fight.

Hustling Billy Brady never let up an instant in his effort to match Jeff with Fitzsimmons, and for days wrangling over the division of the purse was on. Jeffries had a bad arm to nurse, and he took little or no part in the business end of the fight. He had agreed to leave all that to Brady, and proved his long headedness by doing so.

As soon as the damaged arm had healed enough to allow of Jeff using it, Brady sent on for Ryan, and the middleweight champion began to show Jeff the possibilities of the crouch. With this crouch the enormous reach of the man from the Coast was lengthened in an amazing manner, and his body was as much out of danger as it would have been had a fence been built about it. It seemed impossible for any man to get in close enough to hurt Jeff with a body blow, and as the boilermaker was next to meet Fitzsimmons—he of the solar plexus punch—this was a point that could not be too well protected.

Along with the crouch Tommy taught Jeff many other things that were useful in his business, and he hadn't been a week in camp before every one who was privileged to see him train seemed positive that he would give the crafty Fitzsimmons the fight of his life, if he did not succeed in beating him.

Jeffries at this time was a big boy and nothing more. On that account the Easterners did not warm up to him very quickly. The general opinion was that he would some day be a great fighter, if he didn't get too fat, but grave fears were expressed as to what would happen to him when he found himself face to face with Fitz, the greatest ringman of them all.

(To Be Continued.)

SOUR GRAPES ON TAP AT TRAINING CAMPS

What is this big battle going to turn out—a contest and display of sour grapes or a real fight for the world's title?

For plain and fancy backbiting and knocking and hammering and recrimination recommend us to a lot of disgruntled fight managers and trainers.

Here are the latest bits of news that we hear about the big fellows:

Billy Delaney, ex-manager and handler of James J. Jeffries, is going to help train Jack Johnson.

Sam Fitzpatrick, late manager and handler of Jack Johnson, is heart and soul with Jeffries.

Several others are taking sides in the matter for no better or more sufficient reasons.

It looks very much like a case of sour grapes all around.

Naturally the fighters are not going to suffer in the least. Each is going to hear all of the little faults and all the little bits of scandal about the other and all of the petty little scandals and gossip of the camps of other days will be retailed and peddled about the camps of the present.

Always Feared Johnson.

Take Delaney, for instance. He has time and again been quoted as saying that Jeffries never could be hammered back into fighting shape again and that he always was afraid of Jack Johnson, this fear dating back to the night that he saw the big black champion hammer his brother Jack into a sad state of helplessness.

Since the week after Johnson whipped Tommy Burns and the clamor arose all over the country for Jeffries to return and become the "Caucasian's hope" Delaney has been discounting Jeffries's past, present and future and more than once openly stated that he did not think the Los Angeles man was the gamest thing that walked.

Sam Fitzpatrick has been on the same lay. Ever since the day that Jack Johnson alleges that he discovered Sam's duplicity and resented his neglect by shaking him, which was soon after the fight with Burns over in Australia, Sam has been swinging the sledge in tireless fashion. He has told the waiting world that Johnson does not belong in Jeff's class and never will, that he isn't game, can't fight a little bit and that for months he feared hinting at a match with Jeffries because he was afraid Jeffries would think he was kidding him.

Fitz Strong Jeff Supporter.

Fitz is now matchmaker of a San Francisco club and one of Jeff's stanchest supporters on the Pacific coast.

Both Delaney and Fitzpatrick decry the sour grape talk. They say they are sincere in their present remarks.

What then about the remarks of the past? Wasn't Delaney one of Jeff's strongest boosters at one time and didn't Fitzpatrick announce time and again to all the world that Johnson was the greatest ever, the real thing, etc., etc? Of course, but that was in the past and those things are supposed to have been forgotten long since.

Delaney, who is one of the cleanest men in the business and a man through and through for all that, has been trying to push Al Kaufman, the big Pacific coast heavyweight, to the front for the past several years with what success all fight followers know. Whether he ever tried to effect a reconciliation with Jeff or not is not definitely known. He probably did not, for Delaney is not the sort of a man to mince matters, being of the old time type that talks like the real fighter hits—straight out from the shoulder.

ST. MARK'S SCHOOL BASEBALL SCHEDULE

SOUTHBORO, April 23.—St. Mark's School have announced its baseball schedule as follows:

April 23—St. Marks vs. Holy Cross Prep.
April 25—Open.
April 27—St. Marks vs. Roxbury Latin.
April 30—St. Marks vs. Morris Heights.
May 2—Open.
May 4—Open.
May 7—St. Marks vs. Harvard 1913.
May 11—St. Marks vs. Brown 1912.
May 14—St. Marks vs. Pomfret.
May 18—St. Marks vs. Wellesley High.
May 21—St. Marks vs. Cambridge Latin.
May 25—St. Marks vs. Groton (at Groton).

YOUNG BRITT WINS BOUT.

BALTIMORE, April 23.—Young Britt of this city won over Eddie O'Keefe of Philadelphia by a very narrow margin after fifteen rounds before the Eureka A. C. Britt's showing was a great disappointment, while that of O'Keefe was a great surprise, as he made the Baltimore lad hustle in the last three rounds to gain the verdict.

STAR PLAYERS DRAW BIG PAY ON DIAMOND

There is no more interesting study in the "Rise and Growth of Baseball" than the question of wages. The average American citizen may well be tempted by the wages of baseball. It is safe to say that wages have risen faster and higher in the baseball profession than in any other on the face of the earth.

It is a fact that few men outside the magnates themselves know what actual salaries are paid. For instance, the general belief is that Tyrus Cobb of the Detroit Tigers receives a salary of $9,000 a year, and that he has signed a contract for a term of seven seasons. Is $9,000 for seven months or so of actual work a good salary? Well, rather. Those grave, dignified men who occupy the United States Senate and who have to live in grandeur are not any better off as regards coin of the realm in a salary week.

From all quarters comes the report that Hans Wagner of the Pittsburg Pirates gets in the neighborhood of $10,000 for the same amount of work. This would amount to $17,000 or more a year if he played that length of time. Few other skilled occupations pay this amount of money.

Frank Chance, the leader of the Chicago Cubs, gets around $10,000 a season, and so does Christy Mathewson of the Giants. In Mathewson's case his reward is greater than most of the others, for he receives this vast pay for pitching in from twenty-five to forty-five games a year.

Larry Lajoie of Cleveland always has been a big moneymaker since being with the Naps. His actual reward is shrouded in mystery, but it's a safe wager that it is not below $6,000 annually, and perhaps much more. There are scores of men who get from $3,000 to $4,500 a season. This is far higher salaries than the vast majority of eminent ministers receive.

When baseball was young and Comiskey, Hudson, White, Anson, Williamson and Ewing were in their early twenties, salaries were not large as compared to those of to-day. Many stars were lucky to get $150 a month.

Each player in the world's championship games in 1885 between Anson's Colts and Comiskey's St. Louis Browns got about $41 for his "rake-off" of the receipts. Just imagine Hans Wagney and Ty Cobb smiling at $41 each during the late series between the Tigers and the Pirates!

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

Dummy Taylor, formerly with the Giants, is coaching a team of deaf and dumb ball players.

* * *

"We'll win the pennant," pipes Frank Chance. "Haven't a word to say," is Fred Clarke's way of putting it.

* * *

Three out of the first six Pittsburg games postponed. Again it may be asked "where would Ebbetts's schedule have carried us?"

* * *

Pitcher Ruelbach will soon rejoin the Cubs. Then Chance will have to make good his boast that he has an unbeatable team.

* * *

Outside of missing a few trains and getting lost now and then, "Bugs" Raymond of the Giants, is attending strictly to business.

* * *

Sam Leever has been officially designated the Pirates' cold and rainy day pitcher. Sam says he doesn't care; he'll pitch any old day.

* * *

Miller Huggins is doing great work for the Cardinals around the keystone sack. He covers a world of ground, but his hitting is still very weak.

* * *

Why doesn't someone tell John Kling that he is in very much wrong? The season's on, and although John is still in Kansas City we haven't noticed any great wail.

* * *

Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Larry Lajoie are showing the way to all American League clouters, with the big Frenchman having a shade the best of the swatting contest to date.

* * *

McGraw has a tough question to decide. He likes Arlie Latham and wants to keep him. But under the recent ruling no club can carry more than twenty-five players and Arlie would have to be classed as one.

* * *

President Lynch announced yesterday that he wanted his umpires to devote their entire time to the championship race and that they would not be permitted to referee any college games.

* * *

The Phillies have asked for waivers on Outfielder Deininger, the Roxbury boy, and will probably send him to Jersey City, which team is also dickering for Myers of the Boston Americans and Knight of the Yankees.

* * *

President Comiskey of the White Sox has asked Ban Johnson to have the date of the opening of his new ball park changed from July 1 to June 30. Comiskey says that as July 1 falls on a Friday he wishes to avoid the hoodoo and open a day ahead.

EDDIE SHEVLIN GETS DECISION OVER MOODY

BROCKTON, April 23.—Brockton fans saw some fast boxing at Union A. C. when Eddie Shevlin of Boston beat Willy Moody of Philadelphia in twelve rounds.

Shevlin forced the fighting in the early rounds, but Moody came strong toward the last and had Shevlin hanging on. The bell saved Shevlin from a bad beating in the tenth and eleventh. In the closing round Eddie came strong and there was some wonderful fighting. Maffet Flaherty, the Armory A. A. referee, was imported especially for the affair and awarded the decision to the Boston boy, much to the general disapproval of the crowd. The bout looked like a good draw.

The Roxbury lad scored time and again with his left hand and had Moody in a bad way in two rounds with blows to the stomach and kidneys. After that Shevlin found Moody ready to mix it up and the last three sessions were all in Moody's favor.

In the eighth round Moody jabbed Shevlin in the jaw at will and had the latter's face battered badly. He played for the sore spot thereafter and Shevlin began to weaken.

Both fighters roughed it at infighting and in a getaway in the ninth round one of Shevlin's blows caught referee Flaherty on the point of the jaw, sending him to the ropes five feet away.

One of the best bouts on the card was that between Joe O'Brien and Max Landy. The agreement was that both should weigh in at the ringside at 116 pounds and there was $100 weight forfeit, which was to go as a side bet if the weights were made. There were no scales at the club and it was finally agreed that the men should go on and that the bets were off, the winner to take the purse offered by the club.

O'Brien looked as though he would not last half a minute, but he went after Landry like a bear and came very near cleaning the Boston chap up. The Cambridge boy ducked, sidestepped and squirmed away from Landy's haymakers time and again and the crowd roared. A drew decision was given, but the crowd wanted O'Brien to have the verdict.

The preliminary was a fast six-round affair, replete with features. Young Reardon of Brockton won over Lew Whalen after a mill that was fought every second. Joe O'Brien challenged any 105-pound boxer in the country.

JACK FITZGERALD BEATS K. O. BROWN

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 23.—Jack Fitzgerald of Omaha, by a fierce rally in the eighth round, won a decision over "Knockout" Brown of Chicago. Brown fought roughly throughout, but Fitzgerald had the Chicago man in a bad way in the last round. Tommy Smith of Omaha, although outweighed by forty pounds, carried the fight to Harry Ruth, former amateur heavyweight champion of the South, and the verdict of a draw was not approved by the spectators.

CANADIAN BEATS BOSTON BOXER

TORONTO, Ont., April 23.—Defaults spoiled the card in the amateur boxing championship and only eight bouts, instead of twenty-two, were decided. The surprise of the night was the defeat of John Gallant, the U. S. 125-pound champion, by D. Goodman, a Toronto boy, after a hard three-round contest. Hilliard Long put Holt of Toronto out in one round in the 145-pound class. W. W. Blackman of New York and Kendal Salisbury of Boston are omitted from to-night's draw, although they had announced they would be here.

$14,000 SALE FOR KETCHEL-LANGFORD

NEW YORK, April 23.—Stanley Ketchel boxed yesterday for the first time since injuring his left hand in his bout with Frank Klaus at Pittsburg. He had been saving the hand for his coming fight with Langford. He and Nick Miller, his sparring partner, went at it with regulation five-ounce gloves. Manager Harry Edwards of the National Club predicts a packed house. There is a $14,000 advance sale, and Ketchel expects to see his gate go up to $25,000.

HARVARD'S STAR SPRINTER INJURED

"Reggie" Foster, Harvard's 100-yard and 200-yard champion, pulled a tendon in his left leg for the second time this Spring, and has been forced to leave the track. The star sprinter will be out of the game for some time, and it is felt by the coaches that there is very little, if any, hope of Foster's being able to sprint this Spring on the cinders.

YANGER FIGHTS AGAIN.

Benny Yanger, the Chicago featherweight, who has been considered in the "has been" class for several years, is to break into the game again. In New York, next Thursday night, he will meet Henri Piet, the French boxer.

WOLGAST SAYS HE CAN FIGHT 90 ROUNDS

CLEVELAND, April 23.—Ad Wolgast, of Cadillac, Mich., lightweight champion of the world, who is showing at a local theatre and who will be in Detroit next week, laughs at the idea that forty rounds is about his limit. "I can go ninety at the rate I fought in my last battle with Nelson," said the champion.

Someone asked Wolgast how he would defeat the heavyweight champion if he was big enough and had the opportunity. His reply:

"I'm only a little fellow, while Jeff, well, Jim's about the finest specimen of manhood in the world. He'll win the big end of that $101,000 purse on July 4, mark what I say. What's more, he'll win it so quickly that the heads of Johnson's followers will be set all awhirl.

"That shows how the Ad Wolgast wind blows, doesn't it? I'm an ardent admirer of the undefeated champion and I intend to back him to the extent of at least $1,000 to win. If I were Jeff this is just how I would finish Jack Johnson for good and all (and Wolgast stopped a left lead of his sparring partner, Young Dougherty, who was supposed to be Jack Johnson, with his right and brought his left down on the back of his opponent's neck in imitation sledge hammer fashion).

"That blow is Jeffries's best stock in trade. He can club any man to death. The public seeing Jeff in training forms a poor impression of the big fellow. He looks slow and anything but clever. There is a reason for this. Jeff does not dare leave himself out at top speed for fear of hurting his sparring partners. Were he to cut loose the results might prove fatal. I do not think Jeff has ever hit an opponent with all his might, but I do believe that he will put in his best licks on Johnson, for he despises the colored champion."

VOLKMANN FOUR TO ROW YALE

The Volkmann school four-oared crew will row four members of Yale's third varsity crew a mile straight-away race on the Charles river Saturday, May 7. "Ben" Wallis, the Yale varsity stroke, who is a product of the Interscholastic Rowing Association, brought the race about.

Captain Ed. Curtis of Volkmann school obtained the permission of the advisory council of the association for the race.

LANGLEY SIGNS WITH ELGIN

BROCKTON, April 23.—Jack Langley, the crack outfielder of this city, has signed a contract to play the outfield with Malachi Kittredge's Elgin (Ill.) team for the coming season. He left to-day for the West.

Slicer Boothby, also of this city, who played with New Bedford and Lawrence last season, has been with this team about two weeks and has been pitching finely. The nickname "Slicer" was given him by local fans because of his ability to slice the pan. Kittredge managed the Scranton and Wilkesbarre teams and won two championships.

WESTON 17 DAYS AHEAD.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 23.—Edward Payson Weston left Syracuse last night, seventeen days ahead of his schedule. He is to go to Utica without a stop and expects to reach New York next Friday night.

BIG GARAGE FOR THOMAS CAR PATRONS

By J. C. KERRISON.

President E. L. Thomas of the Thomas Company spent Wednesday and Thursday in this city as the guest of his local manager Charles S. Henshaw. Mr. Thomas incidentally looked over the plans for the new Thomas building in this city, and completed the final arrangements for its construction. He expressed himself as decidedly well satisfied with arrangements already undertaken by Mr. Henshaw in the matter of the new building, and authorized him to go as far as he liked so long as the Thomas owners in Boston and vicinity were given an opportunity to trade direct with the home office. The Thomas idea of establishing branches in the leading cities of the country so that Thomas owners can at all times virtually deal with the factory is meeting with no small amount of success. Mr. Thomas believes the system one of the best imaginable for reaching and keeping in touch with his customers.

* * *

The Boston branch of the T. B. Jeffery Company was closed all of yesterday out of respect to the founder of the organization, Mr. Thomas B. Jefferys, whose funeral was being held in Kenosha. Mr. Jefferys was one of the pioneers in the motor industry, and for years worked hard and diligently blazing the way for others and making it possible for the motor industry to attain its present high standing and character.

* * *

The Abbott Motor Company of Detroit has announced that it will contest the Selden patent claims with every resource in its power. An officer of the Abbott Motor Company said: "We do not believe in the validity of the Selden patent, or that they will be sustained in a court of law. There has been no decree issued by any court in the matter, although litigation has been carried on for over seven years. We are forced to the conclusion, both by legal inquiry into the so-called patent and by the tactics of its supporters, to believe that it is only a pretext of a certain combination of motor car manufacturers, acting in concert, to attempt to injure the business of the independent companies. The value of our product for the coming year is estimated at over $7,500,000 and we certainly do not intend to allow the public to be intimidated from the purchase of our cars. We have engaged the best legal talent to protect our interests."

* * *

Low speed contests, rather than high speed races, are coming into vogue, wherever efforts are being made to demonstrate the practical efficiency for the ordinary user of the modern automobile.

The capacity of several cars of different makes to be operated at low speed, was tested in a slow speed contest during the Toledo automobile show, in which the Rambler Fifty-five won over fourteen other entries. There was a judge in each car, and the driver was not allowed to slip the clutch or use the brakes, simply using the throttle on the car.

The Rambler people claim an advantage because the offset crank shaft enables the operator to throttle down on high gear no faster than a man usually walks.

The advantage of low speed in the crowded traffic of city streets, when it can be accomplished without the bother of frequent gear changing, is such an important one that all standard cars, like the Rambler, will quite likely in the future be designed with this advantage in view.

BROWN STAR TO COACH FOOTBALL

PROVIDENCE, April 23.—Adrian (Kit) Regnier, the crack Brown athlete, has signed a contract to coach the football team of Union College. Regnier has been a leading athlete at Brown since he entered, captaining the basketball and football teams and playing baseball.

Last year he was All-American football end, and he has been considered one of the fastest basketball guards in the East. He comes from Dorchester.

BALDWIN WILL FIGHT PICATO OR HYLAND

According to Aleck McLean, manager of Matty Baldwin, those boxers Frank Picato and Fighting Dick Hyland of California now in New York are making too much noise about what they can do to Matty and he wants them to come out in the open and do business the right way. He stands ready to post a forfeit for Baldwin any time that they get up courage to do likewise.

Both the fighters are full grown lightweights while Matty scales nearer the featherweight grade but that makes no difference to the Charlestown boy. He will fight either one of them anywhere, Boston, Philadelphia or New Orleans, and any number of rounds.

Matty gave Hyland a good trimming out in Kansas City and is able to do it again while he made Picato run out of a match in New Orleans.

Either Picato or Hyland and Baldwin would make a good card for the Armory A. A., as the members know there would be something doing in the hitting line from the start to finish.

THE SAME AS IN YEARS GONE BY GRANDMA'S FUNERAL WILL PASS THE BASE BALL PARK

THE ESTEEMED POST NOTES THE arrival of the good ship Hyades (all vessels which arrive are good ships) from Brazil with a consignment of animals, among which is a nilghau and a cappybarri. I have long longed for a nilghau or a cappybarri, or both, and here's my chance. I'm going to have a nil or cappy, or both, and keep them in my office for visiting champs or near champs to fondle, so as to give me time to get my work done. As pets, those birds are pippins. I can tell that by the way the names are spelled.

THERE IS A LETTER IN THIS OFFICE for Joe Walcott, former welterweight champion.

SAMUEL M. ADELBERG, MALDEN, Mass.: The price of admission to the third base bleachers at the National League Park is fifty cents a throw.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Being a constant reader of your column and seeing Tom Flannagan's challenge, I would like to accept at any near date at any club in or around Boston. Answer through your column. Thanking your in advance, I remains, yours,

IT LOOKS TO ME AS IF THIS SHOULD produce something more than the wind jamming contest that has been going on recently about Gribben and the boys who want to box him:

Straight Dope, Boston American:
I am a regular reader of your valuable column, and while reading the earliest edition of the American today I find that Mr. C. Bean of East Boston is out with a challenge to Harry Gribben to fight some mutt that he is managing by the name of Joseph Connor. I wish to state that I am now managing Gribben and will back him against this Conner any time that this four-flusher Bean will call on me and make arrangements. Thanking you in advance, I remain,
GEORGE J. GRAY.
No. 381 East Seventh street, South Boston, Mass.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Will you please inform me through your valuable column if some twenty-two or three years ago a horse, I think "Captain McGowan," trotted twenty miles within one hour at the old Riverside Park at Brighton and later failed in the attempt to trot twenty-one miles in the same time? If so, please state date of successful trot, time made and name of driver. Thanking you in advance, very truly yours,
Boston. CONSTANT READER.

In 1865 Captain McGowan trotted twenty miles over the Riverside Track, driven by J. J. Bowen, in 58m. 25s., which still stands as the world's record for the distance. Riverside Track was a half-mile course in Allston, and later was made into a mile track and renamed Beacon Park. Don't know of the trial to trot twenty-one miles in an hour, but it may have been attempted.

IT'S HARD TO REFUSE HONORS when they are thrust upon us, but I'll have to balk at the invitation that has been extended to me to be a judge at the annual barn dance of the Shawmut Club. I have a vast and varied fund of ignorance about barn dancing, and as I don't carry any life or accident insurance, I'm going to keep as far away from this job as I do from umpiring baseball games. The barn dance is billed for next Wednesday evening at Colonial Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury, and while I have no doubt it will be a hummer and that I would be given a reliable bodyguard, I really can't afford to take chances. I'r with them in spirit, but I'm going to keep out of harm's way.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Please settle this little argument:
A claims that Jimmy Carney, the old English fighter, came to America and fought Jack McAuliffe for the championship of the world after being out of the ring six years.
B claims McAuliffe never fought Carney. What we would like to know is this. If they did fight for the championship, was it a good fight and how long did the fast Jack McAuliffe let Carney stay with him?
I am a great reader of your dope, old boy, and let me tell you it is just fine reading every night.
Hoping to see my question answered soon, I am, yours,
CHARLES ARNOLD.
Standish Mill, Plymouth, Mass.

Carney and McAuliffe fought seventy-four rounds at Revere, Mass., in 1887, and it sure was a good fight according to what people who saw it have told me. The battle did not go to a decision, as friends of McAuliffe broke into the ring when Carney had the better and the fight was stopped.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
I think you are quite right in thinking that Sam Langford would give Johnson or Jeffries a run for their money. I make it a rule to put what little "kale" I have on Langford, no matter who his opponent may be. I think that he is going to be the greatest fighter in the world. Yours truly,
Boston. J. C. C.
P. S. I am not a colored man myself.

It's gratifying to know that some one agrees with me, only I don't remember of even thinking that Langford would give Jeff and Johnson a run. He would give Johnson a run, but Sam's style of fighting was invented for Jeff.

SOUTH SHORE HORSE NEWS

BROCKTON, April 23.—George M. Tougas of this city now owns the trotter, Ardeen, formerly owned by Dr. W. P. Chisholm, and hailed as having a world of speed at a trot. Mr. Tougas got a whack at James O'Leary's Brockton Boy and put it on to "Shamus's" pet in straight heats. The horse certainly comes up to the expectations of driving club members here.

Word has been received that Bonnie Way, who took a mark of 2:16¼ at the Brockton fair last year, will be raced again this season.

Millard Drinkwater of Braintree is to have a choice lot of youngsters to take to the Readville track this season. He thinks well of a yearling colt by Bingen, out of May Day Medium (2:18¼), and believes him to be a youngster of the highest calibre.

Tommy Berry of Milford, who usually trains at the Brockton Fair track, has been wintering a few fast ones at Milford. He tells friends here that the trotting mare Aleynolia, 2:16¼, is in fine shape and will be at the races this year.

Frank D. Barr of Bridgewater is tickled to smash with his chestnut cold, Governor Guild ,by Aquilin; dam Gypsy Girl. The colt will be handled this year by Mr. Barr's trainer, George Shea. The colt is a fine individual and gives promise of a speedy one.

Joe Papineau, one of the starters for the Gentlemen's Driving Club, will soon take a run up to Vermont to look over his brown mare Phantom, 2:16½, which was considered the fastest horse in the city last year.

In the recent account of the purchase of the pacer, Redondale, 2:12, by Con Thornell of this city, an error was made regarding his receiving record. The gelding was marked in 2:12 at Saugus by Dan Watson of this city in 1904. Mr. Watson bought the pacer in Willimantic in 1904 for Cromwell Washburn of Wareham for $1,600. That year Dan campaigned him over the country, marking him for 2:13¼ at Albany, and 2:12 at Saugus later. That year the pacer smashed the track record at Weymouth. In 1905 he reduced the Marshfield track record to 2:15¼, which remained till the pacer Vesta Boy reduced it two years ago.

"THE SPENDTHRIFT"

THE STORY OF HOW A WOMAN BANKRUPTS HER HUSBAND BY HER EXTRAVAGANCE

By John A. Moroso

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

A Remarkable Story of American Life No Woman—or Man Either—Should Miss Reading. Begin It To-day.

CHAPTER I.

"IT is absurd, Dick, for us to try to go on in this fashion. The apartment is cramped. It isn't large enough to hold our friends when we try to entertain them."

Frances Ward put an arm about the neck of her husband, coaxingly.

He was at his library table, and had brought home with him from the office a part of his work. A litter of papers was before him. With his brows contracted and his jaw set tight, he was hard at it when she came to him, radiant in her newest and costliest evening gown.

The room was not large. It was the snug library corner of an apartment in one of the modern buildings close to Central Park and but a step from the avenue. But it was delightfully cozy, with an open fireplace, where the oak logs crackled cheerfully. The bookcases were stored with good old book friends of Dick Ward's youth of struggle and manhood of money making.

Ward slipped an arm about the waist of his wife as she leaned against his chair.

"What is this latest demand on my resources, my dear madame?" he asked, half seriously.

Riverside Drive—Her Aim

She drew back in mock offense. Then she playfully showed her white, regular teeth, pretending to grit them at her husband, and finally pulled him half around in his chair to make him face her.

"Do you mean to tell me that I have been talking to you for two days about buying that house on Riverside Drive and you have not listened at all?" she demanded.

"House on Riverside Drive?" he asked in surprise. "Oh! I do remember something about that. Let me see, you were tired of the apartment and wanted a large establishment. Oh, yes. How much did you say it would cost?"

"It is a bargain, sweetheart," she cooed. "Think of it, only $30,000 down and a mortgage for another $30,000."

"Sixty thousand dollars! Wow!" he half murmured, as if the idea stung him. He moved uneasily in his chair.

"But it is so sweet and comfortable here," he protested. "It isn't a big place, but it is awfully pretty and cozy. The rooms are handsome, the service fine and we only pay $6,000 a year rent. We can afford that."

"Just Like a Broker's Clerk"

"Dick, you talk like a broker's clerk instead of a broker himself," the wife protested, coddling him and forcing his head, plentifully touched with gray, against her breast. "Don't you know that the more we entertain and the better we live, the finer standing it gives us? And it helps you in your business, Dick. It must. The successful man always has plenty of friends. If we cry 'poor mouth' our friends will run away from us."

"Our fair women friends, you mean," he said seriously.

"But, Dick, we must have that house. We will not get another chance like it, and I'm to see the agent to-morrow and"——

"Now, Frances," he expostulated, "just stop and think for a moment. In this comparatively modest apartment we give four large dinners a season. It takes four large checks to pay the bills. We have our subscription to the opera; there are subscription dances and your gowns, the automobile, the pay for the chauffeur, the garage expenses, your theatre parties, your maid, the butler, the chef, the help in the kitchen, tiny as it is, and the girls who do the up-stairs work, despite the fact that we have no up-stairs."

His desire was to point out to her that they were spending a large amount of money despite the fact that they did not keep up a town house. He did not regret a cent of it, but he knew that they were even then sailing on the edge of the wind, and, moreover, he knew that they had, as they were situated, everything that went for comfort and happiness. He wanted to guard her against extravagance beyond the power of his handling and also to keep her and himself just where they were.

Business Is Hateful.

"You poor fellow!" she said, running her carefully kept fingers through his hair. "Business is always on your mind. Your brain is packed with it. You must always figure and count up. Why not leave business at the office? It is hateful. I can't understand it."

He let his arm drop from her waist and picked up a sheet of paper upon which he had been diligently striking balances in several important transactions.

"We have been married ten years," Frances," he said, keeping his eyes on the figures before him.

"Yes, dear,' she half whispered, kneeling and putting both arms about his shoulders.

"And I am still afraid of what the morrow will bring forth,' he went on. "The best ten years of my life have been spent, and with them all the money they have brought us for my work."

"You are going to blame me," she whimpered. "You know I love you as much as I did when we were first married. I can't haggle with butchers and servants to save a few pennies. I don't know how to. Do you want me to try? Will I be a better wife to you if I do those things? Am I not a good and true wife now?"

His Difficult Task.

"Why, of course you are, my sweetheart," he sighed.

"Then we shall have the house!" she exclaimed, triumphantly. "It will be a great economy. Instead of paying rent to a landlord we will be paying it to ourselves. You cannot deny it. Landlords wouldn't own houses if they did not find them profitable at the expense of tenants. We will deprive them of the profit they make from us. Then I shall be very careful and our house will make money for us by saving us the $6,000 we pay every year for this apartment."

Ward looked at the little clock on his desk.

"My dear," he said, "it is near midnight. Run off to bed. I must finish this matter before me, and you know that I hate to be late at the office in the morning. Now kiss me and run away."

"And I must be up early, too," she said, kissing him upon the lips. "I promised to see the agent at ten o'clock.'

'Very well; good night," he exclaimed, anxious to get back to his desk.

She swept from the room to the hands of her maid and he bowed his fine gray head over his desk, putting his nose to the grandstone, pressing it close against it in the endeavor to work out a plan of making his profits of $20,000 a year pay the bills at home of $30,000 a year.

CHAPTER II.

A SPLENDID, square-shouldered man of forty, clean-shaven, springy in his step, entered Dick Ward's Wall street offices.

An office boy fairly plunged at him as he strode toward the mahogany railing about the little space for visitors.

He brushed the youngster aside.

A Stirring Romance in Which a Woman Sacrifices Herself Too Late to Repair the Damage She Has Done.

"Who you want to see?" gasped the boy. "What's your name? What you want to see him about?"

The visitor paid him no heed, but walked by him, turned the glass knob to Ward's private office and entered.

"Phil!" sounded the cheerful greeting given him.

"Dick!" cried the visitor.

Philip Cartwright, lawyer, and Dick Ward, broker, were shaking hands and patting each other on the shoulders as if they had been separated by oceans, islands and continents instead of by only two blocks in the humanity-packed financial section.

"By heaven, I'm glad to see you, old man," exclaimed Ward.

"And I you, Dick," replied Cartwright. "It is an ungodly town. How a little success knocks the love and life out of us here, old fellow; doesn't it?"

How Time Dealt with Them

Cartwright took a long, careful survey of his friend and saw that his hair had whitened and that lines of care, deep as if pencilled by a stylus of steel, stretched from the fine curves of his nostrils to his chin.

Ward studied Cartwright's face and found it clear and keen. He was the picture of health and strength.

"How fine you look, Phil!" he exclaimed. "You don't grow old at all with the years."

"I feel as fresh as the morning," Phil informed his friend. "But you, old chap? You're looking awfully tired. You are going after the dollar too hard. Don't let the money mill grind you up, Dick. You ought to know what this town is by now. You've been here fifteen years. Fact is, I got worried about you. We have drifted too far apart. I've come to ask you to a good old-fashioned dinner, none of these function affairs. We'll wear our old clothes and sit over a good, clean board at the German's—you remember Herr Rackey down in the old swamp section? Yes? It will be like old times. The cooking is just as plain and as good and the white wine as delightful as ever."

"Why not come up to the house?" suggested Ward.

He Objects to Society

"That will mean evening clothes, and then afterward people I am not interested in and can't get interested in will drop in and Frances will be in evening clothes and I'll be treated as company and I'll have a stupid time," protested Phil. "No, my dear boy, that isn't my game. Perhaps that is why we have drifted away from each other. The society business is all right in its way, but, Dick, I don't care for it, and there is no use in my trying to suffer it."

Ward's face beamed with delight.

"I merely suggested it out of perfunctory politeness," he exclaimed. "I want to go to the old places again, just as we did when we shared the dingy old barracks in Washington Square South, in the old days. You remember the pleasant rooms overlooking the top of Garibaldi's bronze head and the leafing trees in Spring. The great parade of the rich and the extravagant never comes under the Washington Arch. It stops on the north side and turns back up the avenue as if afraid of the dinginess and as if disgusted with the few old buildings that are left."

"The Spendthrift" Drives Home the Horror of Extravagance, Says Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

"The Two Bullee Little Lovers"

The Extravagant Wife and Her Husband

Aunt Gretchen, the Shrewd Money Lender

THE SPENDTHRIFT is a true story. It is made up of many little preachments crowded under the cloak of one big one.

And it happens to be for the benefit of the lady-folk alone; but of course any man may take a lesson of ruinous spending to himself.

The woman is a handsome, girlish creature with rich auburn hair, a bright way and a rare gift for spending money, making friends and fearing what they will think of her.

The big truth she drives home is the horror of wild extravagance and the wreck it may make of a man's life—but the subtler and truer picture she makes is in the mirror she holds up to a whining, mean, little lizard soul, that is selfish and dense and does not understand; that weeps and wails when the man that works for it begs it to listen to the hard facts of his bankruptcy; that gropes when he talks of his troubles; that kicks and bites and throws brick and hits below the belt—plays out of all rules of the game; that accuses him of not loving it any more, when he lowers his voice into serious things; that calls him a coward when he has the courage to go down and out, call his ruin aloud to the world and begin all over again, on a salary, at forty-five. In simple words, she is a whining little beast, who is gay when she has plenty and knows nothing of the troubles of the man who loves her, who does not understand what loving her means—in plainer words, a nagging woman, narrow, whining, petty soul.

It isn't a pleasant picture. It makes some of the softer sex squirm and shrivel and flush to the roots of their souls.

It will make some of the bigger among the naggers who don't know the man they love yet go home with a bursting heart, clinched fist and a cast-iron resolve to understand him better, to be more truly his mate in God's eye, and to try to live into life his dream of them.

It's a big work with big words in it, a big preachment, and a story of a big love.

It makes no bids for sympathy for any of its people or the man, unless it be in the last—but that's got to be. We want it to end so—as the fairy tales do, as all stories should—happy ever after!

But until then there are no cheap calls for tears, the woman stands up for what she is, she asks for no pity; the man is a strong, sturdy, every day American business type. His part appeals through its bluntness, its truth. And it rips the very heart of you loose from its roots, as all blunt, true, simple things can.

If you miss reading "The Spendthrift" I'm sorry for you—specially if you need it, or have a mate that does.

NELL BRINKLEY.

JEWELS THAT DIE—Read in the SUNDAY AMERICAN the romance of a $250,000 necklace whose life can't be saved.

Rainy Days

By WINIFRED BLACK

"HEAR the music of the rain,
On the roof and window pane,
Falling down,
Falling down."

Was there ever such delicate music in the world as the music of the rain? How it sings along the window pane and whimpers at the door, and calls and calls, 'til all our small, petty troubles are forgotten and we live when we were little and light of heart and used to run out to the old barn on the rainy days and play in the fragrant hay and listen between gales of laughter to the music of the rain.

What a blessed recess in the hard school of life the rainy day is—if we use it right.

All day long at home. No one is going to run in to bother us with a lot of worrysome nonsense about dresses and hats and where we're going to spend the Summer and whether the woman next door really dresses beyond her means or not. All day long at home.

At home with the children. They love the rain, bless their gay little hearts. It takes more than a storm to depress them. They hear wonderful stories in the music of the rain. Stories about the wind's little boy, who lives up in the clouds, and who's so lonesome that he's always coming down and hanging around the house trying to get the children to come out and play with him. That's his father that you hear whistling around in the branches of the big elm by the door.

"Come h-o-m-e. Come h-o-m-e, little b-o-y," says the wind, but the wind's little boy will not go home to the lonely clouds in the gray sky. He likes to stay down where the grass is green and play among the lilacs and peep out from the bridal wreath bushes and beckon to the little boy up there in the house and try and coax him out in the rain to play with him, but the little boy knows better than that. He laughs and shrugs his fat shoulders and cries out of the window, "Tum in, little boy, tum in," and laughs again to think how full the world is of friends and loving thoughts.

At home with the little girl. Just lost her very best tooth, has the little girl, and she's a little sensitive about it, but her eyes are soft with the mystery of the life that is just opening out before her, and she has so many little secrets to tell and so much love to give.

At home with the big boy—busy with his books and his plays for the Summer vacation—a little large for his age; not always quite sure of himself. Would you trade him for anybody else's boy on earth? And in the evening, just when the rain comes down the hardest, there's a step on the porch. Yes, he's home. Now all the fun begins, and the corn popping, and the candy making—home, home, in the rain.

People who live in the eternal sunshine don't know anything about the beauty of home.

"Hear the music of the rain." It falls perhaps on a new-made grave or one that has been grass-grown for many a year. Hark, who's voice was that at the window?

"On the roof and window pane,
Falling down,
Falling down."

Oh, the comfort, once in a while, of a good, long, rainy day!

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

REMEDIES are unfortunately sometimes worse than the disease which they are made to cure. Tommy's mother had made him a present of a toy shovel and sent him out in the sand lot to play with his baby brother. "Take care of baby, now," said his mother, "and don't let anything hurt him."

Presently screams of anguish from baby sent the distracted parent flying to the sand-lot.

"For goodness' sake, Tommy, what has happened to the baby?" said she, trying to soothe the wailing infant.

"There was a naughty fly biting him on the top of his head, and I killed it with the shovel," was the proud reply.

DO YOU LOVE HER YET?—Would you send your old sweetheart to the gallows, as one man may be called on to do? Read his fascinating predicament in to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN.

WE, too, marvel at the flavor of Orange Pekoe. We did not make that flavor. All we did was to find where such tea grew—and put it into our air-tight, parchment sealed canister, so that no breath of its goodness might be lost.

So we cannot tell you whence its flavor came, or what it is. We simply know that it is there, and that there is a difference—and that it is wonderful.

SOCIETY GIVES PLAY TO-NIGHT FOR CHARITY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

THE latter part of the week is usually so devoid of all forms of entertainments that those who stay in town over the week end are usually at a loss for amusement. But this week is the exception, for to-night the Junior Charity Club presents the musical comedy, "An Angel's Tribulations," for the benefit of the free bed which the club maintains at the Woman's Charity Club Hospital on Parker Hill.

The entertainment is given in Jordan Hall at 8 o'clock. Among the attractive features are the ballet of sixteen dancing girls which is sure to make a hit, and the North Pole dance, which is also bound to win applause. A trio by the Misses Alice Blanchard, Sallie Dunbar and Amy Hertig, also a "nautch" dance by Miss Ava Trelour, and the Anna Held "Silvery Moon Dance," by Ethel King are other specialties.

The drill this year promises to be more successful and picturesque than ever before. Those selected to take part are sixteen of the tallest and straightest young people in the club.

The list of patronesses includes the names of such well known fashionables as Mrs. Oscar Iasigi, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Mrs. H. Staples Potter, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., Mrs. Joseph White, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. Thomas Mack, Mrs. Austin C. Wellington, Mrs. Samuel Mixter, Mrs. George Stedman, Mrs. Edward Glines, Mrs. Joseph Remick, Mrs. Esther Francis Boland, Mrs. Frank Briggs, Mrs. Arthur Herbert Whitney, Mrs. Samuel Crowell, Mrs. Orrin C. How ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION Worked at Gary

Three Decent Drinking Places Were Closed by Law. TWO HUNDRED GIN MILLS WERE OPENED IMMEDIATELY

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

"Model City to swim in drink."

That statement, published on the front page of the Evening Post of New York, refers to the town of Gary, the great steel manufacturing city of Indiana, created on the lake front by the United States Steel Corporation.

The statement, like many in so-called "conservative" papers, is inaccurate.

The FACTS are interesting enough. Here are the facts:

The city of Gary, constructed by the steel company, contains already many thousands of workmen and enormous steel manufacturing plants.

The city was named for Judge E. H. Gary.

Judge Gary's plan and hope was to have AN ABSOLUTELY "DRY TOWN." He hoped that it would be possible—being himself a temperate man and an advocate of temperance—to run the model city on a prohibition basis. But, thinking things over, Judge Gary decided—and very wisely—that the customs and the wishes of workingmen, rather than the beliefs and ideals of individuals, however intelligent, should rule in the city of Gary, if it was to be a REAL CITY.

The city of Gary, properly speaking, cannot "swim in drink," since the steel company controls absolutely the selling of alcohol in the city. Every piece of land is sold with a restriction that makes it impossible for the purchaser to go into the whiskey business.

The city of Gary proper will never swim in drink, and that city is to make an interesting experiment along the lines of REAL COMMON SENSE TEMPERANCE.

There were some time ago in Gary two or three places where alcoholic stimulants could be bought. These were controlled by the steel company, and managed conservatively.

Under the laws of Indiana as existing at the time, any citizen by what is called "a remonstrance" could shut up these places. The remonstrance was forthcoming from some prohibition source, and the respectable drinking places in Gary were closed by law. Immediately, as Mr. Buffington, the president of Gary, informs us, a hundred low gin mills, "blind pigs" or "bootleg joints" were opened on the outskirts of Gary.

Where there had been two or three reputable places, properly managed, there arose instantly more than one hundred of the vilest dives that poison with the worst kind of whiskey and alcoholic stimulants all of those that patronize them.

It would be interesting to know whether earnest, honorable and sincere Prohibitionists really think it desirable to close the respectable drinking places in the town of Gary proper, and drive the workmen—including the thousands of foreigners—to drinking dangerous, poisonous, exciting and vile whiskeys in illicit resorts on the outskirts.

The time during which the "remonstrance," so called, was in effect has passed, and there will soon be opened in Gary a certain number of respectable, well-managed drinking places. The rights of the workingmen will be respected, BUT THE INTERESTS OF THE WHISKEY DISTILLERS WILL NOT BE RESPECTED.

In the first subdivision of Gary, already built, provision has been made for five drinking places. One of these will be opposite the entrance to a great steel mill, in which ten thousand men work.

In the other divisions of Gary as they are opened there will be other suitable places provided for the selling of alcoholic stimulants under proper conditions.

This newspaper is glad to learn from Judge Gary, and from President Buffington of Gary, that the city contemplates, and undoubtedly will put into effect, an experiment along the lines of REAL temperance—such as this newspaper has advocated for a long time.

The plan is to permit in Gary, throughout the territory controlled by the company, the sale of mild alcoholic drinks, light native beers and light native wines, and to prohibit absolutely the sale of the poisonous alcoholic drinks, whiskey, gin and so on.

If this be done, the public will witness in Gary one of the best and most interesting experiments ever made in this country—an experiment welcome to those that want TEMPERANCE, and not mere theory.

If Judge Gary succeeds in preventing the sale of the alcoholic poisons in Gary, if he demonstrates that it is possible to promote REAL TEMPERANCE by discouraging whiskey and giving the men what they really want and what is really good for them, he will render the greatest possible service, not only to the inhabitants of Gary, but to all of the cities, and to all of the citizens, trying to adjust the great drink question on a sane basis.

Judge Gary will be overwhelmed with appeals and threats from whiskey manufacturers. But he will put the welfare of the city which bears his name and the welfare of workingmen ahead of the interests of the whiskey dealers.

Judge Gary may well say to the whiskey manufacturers: "You would not want me to supply your SONS with whiskey. You would be very much obliged to me if I made it difficult or impossible for YOUR SONS to get any whiskey at all. Why do you object to my making it difficult or impossible for my workingmen to get whiskey in Gary? Why shouldn't I consider the welfare of workingmen as well as you would consider the welfare of your own boys?"

When the places in Gary where the men could get their beer were closed, MORE THAN A HUNDRED SECRET WHISKEY SHOPS WERE OPENED IMMEDIATELY ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE CITY. That is a FACT, and any Prohibitionist may learn that it is a fact by inquiring of Mr. Buffington, the President of Gary, who is himself a total abstainer.

We ask earnest, honest Prohibitionists whether they believe that it would be a good thing to make Gary a prohibition town in name, and to compel the hundred thousand workingmen who will soon be at work there in the furnaces and in the heat to go without beer and to take WHISKEY INSTEAD!

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

The Necessity For Belief

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE BOSTON AMERICAN is a secular paper, and does not indulge in the habit of "preaching" to its constituents. It is true that, some time since, the editor presented, with his usual directness and forcefulness, an article on Jesus Christ, in refutation of the position which had been recently taken by a German professor, that there had never been any Jesus Christ.

And yet his article was not at all in the nature of a "sermon," and was evidently received with warm approval by the BOSTON AMERICAN'S readers.

Although there was a certain religious element in the article, it was constructed on those broad lines that exempted it from every class of criticism. There is reason to believe that there is room, also, in the BOSTON AMERICAN for something to be said in regard to God himself, and in regard to the relation which belief in Him stands to two of the practical aspects of daily life, it being understood that nothing will be introduced into this article to which exception would be taken by Protestant, Catholic, Jew, or even Mohammedan.

It Is Necessary for Individual and Social Morality

The first point to be made is this: That belief in God is necessary for the permanent existence among us of individual and social morality. One of the hardest things a man ever does is to do right. There is no other kind of work in which we feel the need of such long and frequent vacations.

It is more tiring to behave one's self perfectly for a day than it is to labor hard with one's hands for a week. One needs, therefore, to bring to his aid and encouragement every possible appliance that is available. It is for that reason that we behave more respectably when we are among people that we know than we do when we are off by ourselves, or among strangers that have no acquaintance with us, and no care for us.

It is in a similar way that we are kept up to the mark of well-doing by the feeling which we have that certain things are right and other certain things are wrong, not because some people think they are so, and have voted to have them so, but because it is God's will that they are so, and because what we call the law of good behavior are laws of His enacting.

Even in human legislation the restraining power of a law does not lie in the words in which the law is written, but in the strength and authoritativeness that come to its expression in those words.

When a child obeys his mother he does not submit to the words she speaks to him, but submits to his mother, to her will and her own personal authority; and he is afraid to act contrary to her command because, in so doing, he acts contrary to her, and matches his weakness against her power and her will.

And so far as we believe in God, and accept laws of moral behavior as being statutes of His enactment, we are affected in the same way, and feel that to treat His laws disdainfully is to trifle with Him and to put our humanness in revolt against His divineness. So that belief in God and in His authority does have a tendency to keep us in the path of decency and rectitude.

It Is Necessary to Bring About Real Brotherhood of Man.

Our second point is this: We are hearing a great deal in these days about the brotherhood of mankind, and it is an idea so beautiful and fine that no language is too strong to be spoken in commendation of it. But a fact that we ought never to forget is this—that two people do not become brothers except by being children of one and the same father. We are not made brothers by simply calling ourselves brothers.

A great deal of what is called brotherhood exists simply in name and not in fact. Something besides mere outward resemblance between two objects is essential to anything like true fraternal relation.

Two trees standing near together in the woods may be of the same species, but we have got to know that they grow up from the same root before we shall associate with them the idea of kinship.

John, the son of Peter, and James, the son of Henry, will resemble each other physically and perhaps morally, but difference of descent is prohibitive of brotherhood, except as the word is understood so broadly as to have no particular meaning at all.

We Can Be Brothers Only When We're Children of Same Father.

If we are all brothers it is only because we are all children of one and the same father. So that if we want to make the brotherly relation between men a fact, and not merely a pretty theory, it will be by cultivating in men the belief in one God, who is not simply our Maker, but who stands to us all in a relation truly paternal.

All of the foregoing is adduced, not in the interest of any philosophical theory, but in furtherance of individual decency and social harmony.

She Ban Talking Tu Funny Senses Faller

By W. F. KI[illegible]K.

"WHY didn't you get the work done up earlier, Steena?" asked my wife.

"Ay ban out on porch, talking to funny faller," said Steena. "He say he ban a senses taker. Ay don't tenk he take many senses, because it seems to me he ant got any senses at all."

"I wish you wouldn't pay so much attention to people that come around the house, Steena. You talked half an hour this morning to the milk man, you wasted twenty minutes with the ice man, and now, when the breakfast things should be all put away, you come in and tell me you have been talking to the census taker."

"Ay yust can't help it," said Steena, a bit sullenly. "My life inside of house ban pretty dull, Ay tal yu, listening to yu and yure husband talking about neighbors. Ef Ay vant to talk to dis har funny senses taker, Ay skol talk to him, Ay bet yu.

"He asking me some funny tengs, tu. He ask me ef Ay ban black or vite. At first dis ban making me mad, because he can see ef he take a look at me Ay ant ban black, but Ay say black, and he put it down black. He say to me den, "How old ban yu? Ay tal him Ay ban saxty-two, and all the time Ay ban only twenty-sax. He put dat down, tu. Den he ask me 'Var skol yu ban born?' and Ay say, 'In Ireland.' An he put down in Ireland. Ay tenk he ban a yackass, but Ay s'pose if dey ant yackasses dey ant around taking dese har senses.

"And dis har tenge he asking me ant the vorst," continued Steena. "He say to me, 'Vat sex, please?' Ay ask him vat he mean, and he say, 'Lady or yentleman?' Ay ban only short time in dis country, but ef Ay ant got more brains in sax minutes dan he having in sax years, Ay skol o[illegible]ure hat. And anoder teng he ask [illegible]—"

"[illegible]ook here, Steena," said the [illegible]fe. "I [illegible]e you realize that you [illegible]t stand [illegible]ound this dining room all [illegible]ay. Please get these dishes off the tabl[illegible]"

"Ay skol getting dishes off all right," said Steena. "But first Ay vant to tal yu sum more about dis funny faller vich ban taking senses. He say to me, 'State yure occupation.' Ay ask him vat he mean, and he say, 'How skol yu getting yure bread and butter?' Ay tal him Ay don't eat none. He say, 'How skol yu make yure money?' Ay tal him Ay don't making enough money to talk about.

"And he say anoder qvestion to me," Steena went on. "He say to me, 'State age and color of yure parents, and vether day ban male or female.' Ay tal him ef he don't yump off porch Ay skol go and getting kettle of hot vater. Ay don't like dese senses fallers.'

"Did he ask you any other questions, Steena?"

"You bet he do. He ask me, 'Is yure sister married, and if so, please state age, birthplace and color of husband.' Ay tal him my sister ban married, but I don't know how old her husband ban and Ay ant sure var he ban born. Ay tal him my sister's husband's color ban blonde.

"Dey make me gude and tired, all dese fresh fallers," concluded our angry domestic. "Over in Sveden Ay bet you we ant having a lot of fresh geezors hanging around porch and asking if our parents ban black or viet and ef so, skol dey have the toothache, and ef so, how many nights in a row. Ay don't know vat it all ban about, anyho, but if more of dem fresh yentlemen come around to asking me tengs, Ay skol yust heat up a kettle of vater, and Ay skol scald dem."
